Provincial Election.

Lennox goes Conservative by a Majority of 12.

The Whitney Government Returned by a Larger Majority.

Mr. Madole put up a strong fight but the money used by the Conservatives in and around Napanee reversed Mr. Madole's former majority in Napanee of forty-three to a majority for Mr. Carscallen of twenty-one. All over the country, and especially in North Fredericksburgh and Richmond, Mr. Madole made large gains and but for the wholesale bribing used in Napanee, would have won the election by a good margin. It is stated on good authority that three thousand five hundred dollars was brought into the county to defeat Mr. Madole. Mr. Madole was not supported by either the Temperance or Liquor interests, though Mr. Madole's stand on the three fifths clause in local option should have commended itself to all temperance voters. It is probable in view of the large number of spoiled ballots, the smallness of Mr. Carscallen's majority and the looseness in handling the ballots and making up the returns in some of the polls that a recount will be asked for, which may change the result materially. The returning officer, Mr. D. H. Preston, will sum up the votes on Monday next. The early reports gave Mr. Madole a decided majority and in response to the request for a speech Mr. Madole spoke a few words from the balcony of the town hall. A little later in the evening Mr. Carscallen thanked the electors for electing him from the same balcony.

MATRIMONY. GONYOU—COLLINS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on June 3rd, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Collins, Raleigh street, Chatham, when their eldest daughter, Miss Nettie Collins, was united in marriage to Charles E. Gonyou, of the Pere Marquette, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gonyou. The ceremony took place at the hour of six o'clock. The parlor was charmingly decorated for the occasion, carnations, orange blossoms, ferns, violets, streamers of white and white doves all going to make the scene a most attractive one. Rev. Dr. Battisby officiated. The bride looked charming in white silk, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Her sister, Miss Bessie Collins, was bridesmaid, and wore white mull and carried pink carnations. Clinton Gonyou, brother of the groom, was best man. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the guests to the number of 20, sat down to a dainty lunch, after which the happy couple left on the 9 o'clock G. T. R. train for eastern points. A host of friends assembled at the station to see them off. They will spend three weeks' honeymoon in the Thousand Islands, and on their return will take up their residence at the corner of Seventh and Water streets. A multitude of beautiful and costly gifts betokened the high regard in which the contracting parties are held by their many friends, both here and at a distance, the list including a couple of handsome oil paintings, the gift of John McCorvie and Son, with whom the bride was formerly a valued employee. Miss Collins is a former Napaneean and her many Napanee friends wish the young couple every joy.

P. Donohue expects to raise his barn on Thursday next.

A large supply of milk is being received at the factory just now.

Robert O'Connor, a resident of this part for over half a century, passed away on Sunday morning, May 31st. His death was due to a complication of diseases from which he suffered for the past couple of months and which defied all medical skill. Deceased was aged about sixty-nine years and was born in Wexford, Ireland, from which place he emigrated in 1851. His funeral which took place to the R. C. Church on June the 2nd, was largely attended.

Mr. E. H. Perry and Mrs. J. R. Perry spent a week visiting friends at Meyers Cave.

Visitors: Mrs. M. Donovan, Forest Mills, Mrs. O. Ingoldsby, Erinsville.

Harry Claus, an Indian, twenty-one years of age, was sentenced at Deseronto, to serve two weeks in jail in Belleville on the charge of vagrancy.

CURES ECZEMA!

Dr. Agnew's Ointment can count its cured patients by the thousands.

But in no one skin disease has it so many almost marvellous cures as in cases of Eczema—this tenacious skin disorder which has baffled many a physician in seeking after a cure. One application puts out the fire, takes away the itching, stinging sensation, and after a few applications the eruptions begin to dry up, diminish, and eventually disappear entirely. The beauty of the treatment is, it leaves no scar or trace of the trouble—but a skin as soft as baby's. Cures piles in four to six nights. 35 cts. (4)

Use Dr. Agnew's Pills, 10 cents.

Dr. Vrooman and J. S. Ham were star base runners for the business men.

The Baseball team of the West Ward School have challenged the Bankers to a match and think they can beat them handsomely.

Potatoes not Politics.

Demand your immediate attention. The bug warriors have possession of the ground. Victory is assured when Lewis Berger's (English) Pure Paris Green is used. This green mixes readily with the water. One teaspoonful is sufficient for a pail. Sold in one pound tins at The Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper.

An Oklahoma girl advertised for a husband and got him. The total expense for advertising, wedding outfit, etc., was $11. He died within a year, leaving her an insurance policy of $10,000. And yet some people claim that it doesn't pay to advertise.

Permanent Results

"I had been suffering for over two months with an obstinate cough, as had also my little girl. We tried several remedies common to any drug store without obtaining any apparent relief, in fact we were growing worse. I got a bottle of Coltsfoot Expectant from my druggist and inside of two days the cough was stopped, and the results so permanent and rapid that we decided to keep it in our home continually.

Largest Family in Paris—Prince of Wales a Great Traveller — Penny Telegrams.

The jewels and objets d'art sent from France to the London exhibition are valued at more than 125,000,000 francs.

A correspondent of the Saturday Review protests against the increasing use of "now and again" for "now and then" or for "once and again."

The French are adopting a new verb, "luser," meaning to transact affairs in a bold, hustling spirit. The fact that the verb is derived from the English word "business" may be taken as another tribute to the commercial superiority of the Anglo-Saxon.

The largest family in Paris has eight sons and five daughters living and three children dead. The eldest son applied the other day for exemption from military service. In granting his request the authorities exhorted him to help his father in the arduous task of rearing such a numerous progeny.

Not more than forty-two certificates of naturalization were granted to aliens last month in Great Britain. Fifteen came from Germany, eleven from Russia, four from Sweden, three from Austria, two from Greece and one each from France, Italy, Rumania and Persia. Two were described as being subjects of no foreign State.

At the annual dinner of the Royal Colonial Institute the Prince of Wales, speaking in the presence of a widely travelled audience, including almost every notability in London connected with the empire, said: "Without boast I may claim that probably no one in the room has landed on so many different portions of British soil as I have."

It is hoped that a conference of the Postmasters-General of Europe will be held this year in London with a view to introducing penny a word telegrams throughout Europe. The British Postmaster-General estimates the diminution of revenue through the adoption of this measure as not exceeding £120,000, which would not involve any actual loss, the present profits being excess of that figure.

The recent disastrous accidents in the British navy have given rise to an agitation against the practice of conducting manoeuvres and sham attacks at night without lights. That frequent spokesmen on naval matters, T. G. Bowles, urges that "it would be as reasonable to carry on manoeuvres with shotless guns and live torpedoes in order to accustom the men to face them. The Times advocates the continuance of the practice.

Montenegro is building a new capital at Antivari, the port of its present capital. The works, which are in the hands of Italian contractors, were inaugurated this month by the ruling Prince, who insisted in his speech on the close of interest binding Montenegro to Italy on the one hand and to Russia on the other, while he left Austria out in the cold. It is supposed that the new town is to be the terminal of Russia's Balkan line, and the speech is regarded as having considerable diplomatic importance for that reason.

The Grand Duke Michael of Russia says in the preface to his novel "Never Say Die," which is understood to be largely autobiographical: "Belonging, as I do, to the imperial blood, and being a member of one of the reigning houses, I should like to prove to the world how wrong it is in thinking that we are the happiest beings on earth. He is perhaps less open to the charge of 'giving glimpses of the obvious' when he says: 'As Paris in the days of its glory was the centre of art, beauty and fashion, it is London which now-a-days holds unrivalled this proud position.'"

ARMY SCHEME OF CHINA

FRENCHMAN HEARS SHE MAY ENROLL 40,000,000 MEN.

She Already Has Nearly Half a Million Well Drilled and Equipped Soldiers.

A Frenchman who has been making a study of the Chinese army warns Europe that it is not inconceivable that within ten years China may be able to oppose to the white nations of the world a thoroughly drilled and equipped force of 40,000,000 of soldiers. It is quite certain, he thinks, that it will have the biggest army in the world—at least 6,500,000 men ready to mobilize at short notice and equal in courage, drill and equipment to any European troops.

This 6,000,000 minimum is provided for by present plans. The increase to the maximum figure means nothing but a little more effort—a draft on the wealth of population which is trivial when spread out thin over so vast an empire. The writer fears that, stimulated by their own remarkable performances in army making up to date, the Chinese rulers may make a change in their plans at any time and may do it without taking Europe into their confidence.

The new Chinese army had its inception about 1889, when the late Marshal Ma issued an order abolishing the red umbrellas which the Chinese soldiers used to take into the field with them.

MA WAS AN ABLE ORGANIZER,

and the sort of soldiers that were produced under his management were revealed to Occidentals in 1900, when the capture of the Taku forts took place.

Fighting Chinese soldiers previous to that encounter had been little better than massacre; but the defenders of the Taku forts and those of Tientsin and of Chan Hai Kuan, armed with modern rifles and having Armsstrong and Krupp cannon, fought not only with desperate bravery but with discipline. They gave pretty nearly as good account of themselves as an equal number of European troops would have done.

When China caught her breath in 1900 she realized that these were the only sort of troops worth having. Rejecting the plan submitted by her British adviser, Sir Robert Hart, for the creation of a miniature army of four divisions to be developed in the course of ten years, the Lien Ping Pu, or council of war, boldly adopted a scheme of evolution which would seem startling in any country.

It contemplated the creation of twenty army corps of two divisions each, each division comprising two brigades of infantry, a regiment of artillery and one of cavalry, a battalion of engineers and a battalion of supply train. Each brigade was to be composed of 300 men each.

A SCHEME OF LOCAL RECRUITING

was adopted with a period of active service of nine years, to be followed by seven years of reserve with a month's drill each year. The creation of twenty-five schools of cadets with a capacity to furnish 4,000 officers in the first three years and an annual contingent of 1,500 thereafter was also decreed, and a primary levy of 500,000 men was made.

The viceroys of the various provinces were further ordered to include in their budgets a sufficient tax for the support of this force. No exact estimate of the revenue needed was to be made, however, until the Government had 800,000 men in active service and 4,000,000 reserves.

It used to be the way that things ended with talk in China, but times appear to be changed, according to the French authority, 420,000 men armed and drilled in modern style, organized into fifteen army corps with capable officers.

There are no more red umbrellas and no more banners inscribed with threats before which the enemy is supposed to run away. Every soldier has for the time being a Mauser rifle and plenty of ammunition, which he is taught to burn

PERSONAL POINTERS.

Notes of Interest About Some of the World's Prominent People.

Colonel W. R. Robertson, who is to become brigadier-general under the new Aldershot chief, Sir H. Smith-Dorrien, has had a remarkable career. He enlisted as a private in the 16th Lancers thirty years ago, and spent over ten years in the ranks before getting his first commission in the 3rd Dragoon Guards. He was only a captain in the early days of the Boer War, and in less than eight years has risen from this rank to brigadier.

When King Edward desires to pay a call on a personal friend a message to this effect is sent earlier in the day. This rule is almost invariable, but on one occasion His Majesty neglected the precaution, and on arriving at the house of his friends found the hosts out of town and the charwoman in charge. The King desired to go in and write a message, but was asked by the cautious caretaker for his card, and as that was not forthcoming she declined to let him in. "He was a very pleasant, civil-spoken gentleman," she told her employers on their return, "but as he hadn't a card I left him outside." It was only some time afterwards that the master of the house discovered to his horror the identity of the visitor.

Seldom does one find such a curious combination of talents in one man as that which gained name and fame for the late Mr. William Jacks, LL.D., whose will has just been proved at $562,500. Mr. Jacks, who was of humble parentage, began life in a Hardeeport shipyard, and laid the foundation of his fortune by saving a cargo of iron sold to a fraudulent Italian. A keen shrewd business man, he soon earned promotion after changing from the manual to the commercial side of the works, and ultimately founded his own successful business as an iron and steel merchant. His leisure time he devoted to self-improvement, and developed not only into a notable man of letters, but became one of the finest German scholars in Europe. He wrote several valuable books, the best known of which, perhaps, are "Robert Burns in Other Tongues" and "Life of Bismarck," the latter earning the praise of all foreign critics. And yet Mr. Jack's education proper was limited to learning the "three R's" in the village school of Swinlock, Lanarkshire, Scotland.

Mr. Comyns Carr, the dramatist, has met many famous men during his career, and has a rare store of anecdotes concerning authors he has known. Two of these concern the fondness of Tennyson and Browning for port. The latter once told Mr. Carr a story about the poet's father, Mr. Browning, senior, seeing his son drinking a glass of water on one occasion, turned to him and said, "Water, Robert, for washing purposes I believe is useful. For navigable canals, I am told, it is indispensable. But for drinking, Robert, God never intended it." Tennyson also loved his glass of port. On one occasion, when Henry Irving paid him a visit, the poet said, "Irving, you like a glass of port, don't you?" "Yes, I do," said the actor; whereupon Tennyson poured him out a glass of port, and finished the bottle himself. In later years the same little ceremony was gone through up to a certain point, but on this occasion the port was under the doctor's restrictions, and Irving, in relating the incident afterwards to Mr. Carr, said, "Tennyson took the glass, and I finished the bottle."

The Swedish Royal Family has not been without its love romances. Gustaf V., who succeeds King Oscar, is a cultured man like his father, with an extremely well-balanced mind. He has practically held the reins of Government for the last seven years, and has proved himself a ruler in whom the people can place every reliance. And yet in his youth he fell in love with the daughter of a country clergyman, and offered to renounce all his Royal rights if his father would allow him to marry her. King Oscar, however, refused, and the Crown Prince, as he then was, was obliged to give up his love dream and marry Princess Victoria of Baden, in order that the succession might be properly secured.

TO TELL THE AGE OF EARTH.

Radium May Write Secret of Age From Old Mother Earth.

R. J. Strutt, a British scientist of high standing, in the course of a lecture at the Royal Institution, London, said that, thanks to recent investigations of radium, it soon would be possible to estimate the exact age of the earth.

Accepting the hypothesis that helium is constantly produced, at a definite speed from radium, Mr. Strutt proposed a quantitative estimation of the radium and the helium present in various minerals, as a means of determining their relative ages. Proceeding on similar lines, when once the rate at which radium is transformed should have been estimated, a simple operation in arithmetic would solve the problem of the age of the earth.

"I have," said Mr. Strutt, "been able to find that the age of flints present in chalk, is only one-thirtieth of the age of the mineral that is being mined in Cornwall. It is to be hoped that in this way it will be possible to form an exact estimate of the date on which man first appeared upon the earth."

QUICKLY ATTENDED TO.

"But, I don't know you, madam," the bank cashier said to the woman who had presented a cheque.

But this woman, instead of saying laughingly, "I do not wish your acquaintance, sir," merely replied with an engaging smile:

"Oh, yes, you do, I think. I'm the 'red-headed o.j. virago' next door to you, whose 'scoundrelly little boys' are always reaching through the fence and picking your flowers. When you started to town this morning your wife said: 'Now, Henry, if you want a dinner fit to eat this evening you'll have to leave me a little money. I can't keep this house on plain water and ten cents a day.'"

"Here's your money, madam," said the cashier, pushing it towards her and coughing loudly.

A MODERN SOLOMON.

"The minister of one of our village schools was examining some boys on a piece of poetry, which he had given them to prepare the night before. They all said it excellently except one small boy at the bottom of the class. On being asked to say his lesson, he said:

"I can't remember it, sir."

Master in a rage: "Why, what's your head made of?"

Boy: "To keep my collar on, sir."

SHE HAD NO ALTERNATIVE.

There is the story of a clergyman in Scotland who refused three times to unite in holy wedlock a man and a woman, because the man had indulged too freely in liquor.

A few days later the same thing occurred with the same couple, whereupon the minister gravely remonstrated with the bride, and said they must not present themselves again with the bridegroom in such a state.

"But, sir," said the bride, "he winna come when he's sober."

QUITE HONEST.

A gentleman went into a fancy store to buy something. As it was early, the storekeeper had to go upstairs to get his cash-box in order to procure some change.

Before going so he went into the little room next to the shop, and whispered to his little son, "Watch the gentleman that he don't steal anything."

Then, bringing the boy out, sat him on the counter.

As soon as the storekeeper returned, the child rang out, "Pa, he didn't steal anything; I watched him."

It takes some people broke dressing well enough to make others think they are not.

are the happiest beings on earth. He is perhaps less open to the charge of "giving glimpses of the obvious" when he says: "As Paris in the days of its glory was the centre of art, beauty and fashion, it is London which now-a-days holds unrivalled this proud position."

A French naval expert, M. A. Roussau, taking "Ships of the Dreadnought era" as the vital part of contemporary navies, calculates that by the end of 1908 Great Britain will have fallen below the "two Power standard." The fleets of the Powers will then, according to his figures, possess the following strength in such ships:

	Eng.	Ger.	Land.	many.	U.S.A.	France	Japan
Battleships ..	8	7	4	6	5
Cruisers ..	4	2	.	.	3
Totals ..	12	9	4	6	8

Thus the only combination to which Great Britain would be superior, on this showing, is that of the United States with France.

The medals to be awarded at the Olympic Games in London are now being exhibited in the Royal Academy. The artist is a talented young Australian, Bertram Mackennal. They are said and appear from photographs to be finely imagined and executed. The reverse of the prize medal shows St. George riding down the dragon, with an angel looking on; that of the commemorative medal, a winged Fame, erect, with a palm in the right hand and a trumpet in the left. The reverses are to be used this year alone. The obverse, it is said, have been adopted for use at future Olympic meetings. The obverse of the prize medal shows an athlete being crowned by two female figures; that of the commemorative medal a victor returning home in a four horse chariot.

GRAVEYARD OF THE ATLANTIC.

Many people have heard of Sable Island, "the graveyard of the Atlantic," but few have any idea of what the place is really like. It is situated about 150 miles from Halifax, and as its name indicates, it is "an island of sand." Though many people entertain the idea that it is a rugged, rocky island, upon which ships are wrecked by scores, the fact is that shipwrecks on Sable Island now-a-days are quite a rarity. And as for rocks, why, there is not a rock on the entire island as large as your hat! Formerly it was a frequent occurrence for the life-saving crews to be cut off from the world for months at a time; but now all is changed. An up-to-date Marconi station has been erected, and the "radio sand-beap" is now an important unit in the vast wireless system of the North Atlantic.

WARNED BY HIS WHISKERS.

Of what use are a cat's whiskers? Are they merely to give puss a handsome, martial appearance, or have they a distinct use? The latter is the case. They are organs of touch, each one being connected with the nerves of the lip. The slightest contact of these whiskers with any object is, therefore, felt by the animal, although the hairs themselves are insensible. When a lion is stealing through the jungle his whiskers warn him of any obstacle which may retard his progress, or of any bush which might rustle if he touched it in passing. So his whiskers, in conjunction with his padded feet, enable him to move through the thickest growth with a deadly silence.

WHAT HE KNEW.

The lawyer shook his finger warningly at the witness, and said:

"Now, we want to hear just what you know, not what someone else knows, or what you think, or anything of that kind, but what you know. Do you understand?"

"Well, I know," said the witness, with emphasis, as he leaned forward easily in the box. "I know that Jim Clay said that Bill Thomson told him that he heard John Thomas's wife tell Sid Smith's daughter that her husband was there when the fight took place; and he said that they flung each other about in the meadow pretty considerably."

authorily, 420,000 men armed and drilled in modern style, organized into fifteen army corps with capable officers.

There are no more red umbrellas and no more banners inscribed with threats before which the enemy is supposed to run away. Every soldier has for the time being a Mauser rifle and plenty of ammunition, which he is taught to burn to good effect. But the Chinese have devised a magazine rifle of their own which they consider much better than any now in use in Europe and which is besides the only rifle in the world the mechanism of which is an absolute secret. Six arsenals have been established with proper machinery for making this arm. They are working night and day, and it is said that they can turn out 3,000 guns a week.

A VERY IMPORTANT DETAIL.

It is that the new army is regularly paid. A serviceable uniform has been adopted for the troops. Zouave trousers are tucked into half boots. The soldier on parade wears a neat tunic with a belt, but on active service he is clad in a flannel shirt, over which he wears cross belts to carry his knapsack and cartridge case.

The men are of fine physique and the health in the army is said to be excellent. They are as easily fed as the Japanese. They are completely disciplined, and with the Chinese indifference to death, which has been displayed under the most disastrous conditions, it seems as if they might man for man prove equal to the best European troops.

There is a fair supply of field and mountain artillery and the supply of Krupp siege guns is steadily increasing. There are 7,000 cadets at present in the military schools, and 900 pupil officers, as they are called, are receiving higher instruction in ordnance, strategy and tactics at four superior schools. A military academy which is to occupy somewhat the position of our own war college is being organized in Pekin.

The Frenchman estimates that the expense of the army on a basis of a million active and seven million reserve soldiers will not involve an increased burden of more than 5 cents a head on the population of China. Even so poor a people, he thinks, can stand this, and the Government and people have grown so proud of the army that he sees no hope of any slackening in its development. "This is the real yellow peril," is the conclusion that he draws.

DEATH DAY OF KINGS.

January, 28th is the Fatal Date in History.

Jan. 28th seems to have been a death day of great monarchs, for on that date in 814 died Charlemagne, King of France and Emperor of Germany, the greatest of the Frankish Kings and the first Teuton on whom the dignity of Roman Emperor was conferred. He was a religious and patriotic man, affectionate to his family, and having a very high conception of his public duty.

On the same date, in 1547, died our "Bluff King Hal," whose character has been variously estimated, according to the reading of the events of the period given by the different historians; but, under any view, he was a man of vigor, of unshaken, strong passion, and immense force of will. Completely breaking from Rome, Henry became "Protector and Supreme Head of the Church and Clergy of England"; while during his reign Wales was incorporated with England, and Ireland raised from a lordship to a kingdom.

Another monarch who died on this date was Abbas the Great, of Persia, who died in 1628—a monarch whose fame spread over Europe. On this day, in 1725, also, died Peter the Great—the first monarch who took the title of "Emperor of All the Russias." He abolished the patriarchal dignity, to curb the clergy, and established the "Holy Administrative Synod," of which he was the head. His great reforms also extended to all departments of the state, for which mighty task he had only his own unconquerable genius and energy.

place every reliance. And yet in his youth he fell in love with the daughter of a country clergyman, and offered to renounce all his Royal rights if his father would allow him to marry her. King Oscar, however, refused, and the Crown Prince, as he then was, was obliged to give up his love dream and marry Princess Victoria of Baden, in order that the succession might be properly secured. Curiously enough, however, King Oscar gave way when his second son, Prince Oscar, created a sensation, nearly twenty years ago, by announcing his intention of marrying Miss Ebba Munck, his mother's favorite maid of honor. The marriage took place in 1888, and in consequence Prince Oscar renounced all rights of succession to the throne. The youngest of the late King's sons is Prince Eugene, who is a painter by profession, and spends most of the year in Paris, where he has a studio. It is said that he clears quite $10,000 a year from his art.

Fortune, we are told, only knocks at a man's door once in a lifetime, and if refused admittance passes by, never to return again. The saying is belied, however, by the career of Mr. George McCulloch, a Glasgow boy, who arrived in Australia just under sixty years ago with less than $25 dollars in his pocket, and who died the other day a millionaire. This is how Mr. McCulloch threw away his first chance of acquiring a fortune. One night, sitting in a liny shanty at the foot of the Broken Hill mine, soon after its discovery, he played a game of euchre with a companion, his stake being a fourteenth share of the mine itself. He lost, and the share which thus passed out of his hands was, six years later, worth no less than $6,250,000. Then Dame Fortune gave him another chance. In September, 1883, Mr. McCulloch was the manager of a small boundary sheep station not many miles from Broken Hill. One morning a boundary rider rode into the station and excitedly informed Mr. McCulloch of another discovery of silver upon the hill. Straightway a small syndicate was formed, and a claim, "pegged out." All the station hands, including Mr. McCulloch, risked $375 apiece in the venture, and work was begun in earnest. In a few months the shares of the Broken Hill Proprietary had a market value of $80,000,000.

IN FINANCIAL CRISES.

Many a bank confronted by a run has saved itself from ruin by artifice. One American bank, just as a run was starting, hired half a dozen men to draw out large sums in cash. These men, with great bundles of greenbacks and with huge bags of gold, would run round to the rear of the building, hand in all that money, and then come and draw it out again. After half a dozen such drawings the run ceased. One banker, on the verge of ruin, got a sack of metal, spread a layer of gold coins on the top, and nailed the sack to the paying-teller's counter. The sack was shown to the multitude that had gathered for a run, and a blacksmith was bidden to lift the sack, if he could. Of course, he couldn't, and the crowd dispersed, satisfied that, with so much gold, the bank was safe. Another dodge is to paint, on the morning of a run, all the woodwork. Wet paint shows the crowd up considerably. Nobody wants to get his clothing smeared.

GROW RHUBARB IN YOUR CELLAR.

To cultivate the very finest rhubarb, you do not need any garden at all, but just a corner of a cellar, and an old barrel or deep box. Bore a dozen holes in the sides of your barrel for ventilation, and a few in the bottom for drainage. Then place in it a layer of cinders about two inches deep, and cover this with ordinary garden soil. Now plant your roots side by side, and cover them with another layer of earth. Water them occasionally, and keep the top of the barrel covered with a piece of carpet. It is true that rhubarb can be bought very cheaply, but that grown in the way described will be far finer than any you could possibly buy.

HOW TO FORECAST THE WEATHER WITHOUT INSTRUMENTS.

Here are Some Very Interesting Hints to the Amateur Weather Prophet.

As a weather prophet, "the man in the street" might be described as a dead failure. Not that he admits his ignorance for one moment. Indeed, he rather prides himself upon what he considers to be his ability to forecast the weather for the next twenty-four hours by the state of the wind and sky. And when you comment upon the fact that nine out of every ten of his forecasts are wrong, he blandly remarks that, of course, you cannot be sure of anything in this world of surprises.

A great black cloud appears in the sky, and he immediately cries, "Fetch out your umbrella and mackintosh." But the reader of this article will not burden himself with these things until he has carefully examined the edges of that black cloud.

If they appear misty above, and in the form of long sweeping "curtains," sometimes called "cows' tails," below, rain of a more or less heavy nature will certainly follow, if the cloud under observation is moving in the direction of the observer. If, on the contrary, the cloud has clear-cut edges and merely a brown, smoky hue in its general aspect the chances are that it will pass over without causing any precipitation whatever in its passage. Such clouds as the latter are being generally loaded with blight, which is found in the shape of flies and caterpillars on trees and plants after their passage.

Often the same form of cloud, under a slightly different aspect, may signify wholly different meteorological conditions. Take, for instance, the "mottled clouds," or "mackerel sky" as it is commonly known. It is exceedingly pretty from a picturesque point of view, and has been compared by some to a flock of sheep lying down. It certainly resembles bundles of wool more than anything else. Such a sky usually precedes a gale by about half a day. If, however, the "wool" is seen in detached pieces, it is indicative of very fine weather of prolonged duration.

Then, again, the appearance of cirrus—to quote the technical name of these delicate, feathery clouds, sometimes seen in fan-shaped groups, owing to the effect of perspective—in a clear sky may have two meanings, and those quite different.

Thus, if a clear blue sky on a summer's day becomes gradually flecked with light feathers of cirrus which just as gradually melt away again, leaving the sky an even deeper blue than before a long term of may be confidently anticipated. If, however, on the contrary, it appears in long spirals stretching out fan-shaped from the horizon, and being apparently "well rooted" (if the term be allowed) in cirro-stratus, a thin white sheet often covering the whole of the sky, and thickening generally as it advances, then it may be fairly safely concluded that rain, and probably wind, is situated in the direction to which the root-ends converge.

Do not try to forecast the weather by the changes of the moon, for that luminary has no influence whatever on meteorological conditions. Mr. Horner, however, shows how a man may be his own barometer even by remembering certain old weather sayings, which have stood the test of practical application in the present day. In nine cases out of ten, for instance, the old saw, "Rain before seven, fine before eleven," proves true.

Another true saying, amply verified by the weather of 1904, is "If the moon

ASLEEP FOR THREE YEARS

EMINENT SPECIALISTS ARE COMPLETELY NONPLUSSED.

Case of German Official Puzzles Doctors — Remains are in Perfect Health.

Professor Eulenburg, the eminent specialist in nervous diseases, speaking at a meeting of the German Physiological Association here, described the case of a Government official, named Arnheim, who has been sleeping continuously since June 10, 1904—that is, three years and seven months.

Professor Eulenburg attributes Arnheim's strange condition to an accident which happened before he fell asleep, when he struck the back of his head by a fall. Arnheim's medical attendant at that time was unable to discover any injury to the brain, but ten days after the accident he fell asleep, and has been sleeping continuously ever since. Professor Eulenburg gave the following description of the patient:—

FEEDS AUTOMATICALLY.

"He is lying on his back in bed, the head being slightly inclined to the right side. The forehead is wrinkled, as though the sleeper were disturbed by bad dreams. The limbs can be freely moved. The skin has lost its sensibility, and deep needle pricks do not produce the slightest effect. Other incisions in the flesh, painful for normal beings, have no effect on the sleeper; deafening noises made close to his ears fail to rouse him; and a dazzling light turned on his eyes is likewise ineffectual. Arnheim is fed regularly. He chews the food placed in his mouth slowly, and swallows instinctively.

LIKE WAX FIGURE.

"During the whole 43 months Arnheim has never once opened his eyes; has never spoken a syllable, and never betrayed the least sign of consciousness. Sometimes Arnheim's wife, who tends him incessantly with patient care, removes him from the bed; clothes him, and places him in an armchair. In this position he presents a surprising appearance.

"This ghastly pale man, sitting with closed eyes, has something uncanny about him. The sleeper then recalls irresistibly those wax figures placed in natural positions in waxwork shows to deceive naive visitors into the belief that they are real human beings.

Professor Eulenburg considers a sudden awakening to be possible. Many medical experts have visited Arnheim, and have watched the sleeper for lengthy periods, without coming to a definite conclusion as to the cause of his long sleep.

CURES FOR INSOMNIA.

Mrs. Philgimthrow Suggests One That Might Do in Some Cases.

"In my own case," said Mrs. Philgimthrow, "I find that insomnia proceeds largely from worry over money. My nerves are all right and I have a cast iron stomach. I can eat anything and enjoy it, and as a general proposition life looks pretty rosy to me; but still I do occasionally have nights when I can't sleep when I lie awake worrying over how I am going to make both ends meet.

"I never deliberately consider financial questions at night, but I do find that completely comfortable evening—than sometimes—and this may be after a most critical question obtrude themselves upon me after I have gone to bed.

"To slave off these unpleasant questions and enable myself to forget them so that I could go to sleep I have tried various familiar methods; I have got out of bed and stood up to make myself tired; I have recalled and dwelt on pleasant journeys; I have counted from one up to a million, more or less; I have said the alphabet backward over and over again; I have tried many things, but do not know what in my case I find most

SEEKS LAW OF HEREDITY

WORK OF CAMBRIDGE SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURAL SCIENCE.

English Experimenters Have Discovered Some Wonderful Facts.

The School of Agricultural Science at Cambridge has accomplished greater marvels in recent years than the famous achievements of Burbank in California. A report soon will be issued which is expected to make a greater sensation than any other recent discovery.

The line of investigation has been the study of what is known as Mendell's law of heredity and its application is to be demonstrated not only in vegetable life but with regard to animals as well. The principle is best shown in a simple illustration. It is found that if dwarf peas and tall peas are crossed the resulting crop next year will be all tall peas. The second year's crop, however, will be the exact proportion of one-quarter dwarf peas and three-quarters tall peas.

Of all these tall peas just one-quarter will be pure tall and never again will show signs of dwarfness. The remaining two-quarters will be impure, but again when crossed with their like will give pure tall and pure dwarf mongrels in due proportion.

GIVES TEST IN FOWLS.

It is affirmed that all qualities transmissible by heredity in vegetable and animal life are governed by this law. In regard to animals, the simplest and best known case in common experience is, perhaps, that of the blue Andalusian fowl. If the pure black and speckled white varieties be mated together all chickens will be blue Andalusians. But mate two blue Andalusians and it always happens that the chickens are of three sorts—some black, some speckled white, and some of a composite color known as blue Andalusian. The most inexplicable fact in this family picture of inherited qualities is both blacks and whites, and also half the descendants are blues. The next generation may be called pure bred—that is, in certain definite respects, no trace of a cross will again appear in their progeny.

This issue proves the existence of a deep rooted law that revolutionizes the science of developing varieties.

CAN CONTROL FIXED LAWS.

Though the physical secret is obscure, the course of this strange behaviour in fowls and peas may be considered for practical purposes. After vast numbers of experiments, chiefly with plants, but also with poultry, mice, and other animals, a number of characteristics, such as the shape of the comb in fowls, certain colors in peas, beardiness in wheat and perhaps the eye color in man, have been marked down as answering fixed laws which we can control.

The Mendell law is, of course, by no means free from complications, and experiments still are in their infancy. Still Cambridge biologists have turned out wheat which combines the strength of the Manitoba hard grain with the yield of softer English wheats. It is estimated that the value of the English wheat crop will be increased by this means to the extent of fully $2.50 an acre. This is only one of the practical features of the investigation which shortly will be announced.

The problem of the application of the Mendell law in breeding animals and human beings is much more complicated, but it is believed important discoveries in breeding sheep, cattle and perhaps horses already are available.

CUTTING GREAT DIAMOND

PREPARING THE CULLINAN GEM FOR KING EDWARD.

Tests With Clay Model Show Best Way to Treat It, Then Imbedded in Cement.

Besides the details already given out by the men who are negotiating the work of cutting the Cullinan diamond, the gift of the Transvaal to King Edward VII., the historic stories of the Kohinoor, Queen Victoria's celebrated gem, pale their ineffectual fires. Quietly and unostentatiously Louis Asscher and Henry Duizend, of the firm of Joseph Asscher & Co., of London, Paris and Amsterdam arrived in New York the other day, but they were found out and made to talk of the greatest jewel perhaps the world has ever known.

In the first place, the Cullinan diamond, after it has been cut, is to be placed among the crown jewels of the Royal family of Great Britain, and the work of separating it into parts and removing possible defects was a very delicate one. Joseph Asscher, head of the firm, undertook the task in person.

First he cleft the diamond into two pieces in such a way that a defective spot in it was split exactly in the centre, leaving a part of this defect on each piece of the stone. Now, from one piece is being cut the large diamond, and the other part will be cut into smaller sizes, and even then one of these smaller stones when finished will be one of the largest diamonds in existence. The larger stone probably will be drop-shaped.

Louis Asscher explained how the work was done. First he said it was necessary to proceed slowly in so important an undertaking. A model of the diamond was prepared in clay and experiments were took upon this model, in order to arrive at a definite plan of procedure.

EMBEDDED IN CEMENT.

When it had been determined how best to go on a special box, with sliding sides, was prepared, and the diamond was imbedded in cement and placed on the top of a stick, not unlike a large drumstick, and an incision about one-half of an inch in depth was made by another stick, in which was imbedded a sharp-edged diamond, edge upward. When the incision was made a specially constructed knife blade was placed in the slit and struck with brute force with a thick piece of steel, leaving the stone in two. The cleaving, which took place some time ago, was performed in the presence of several experts.

Now that the stone has been cleft, Mr. Asscher said, the process of polishing it is under way. Three men work in one room from seven o'clock in the morning until nine o'clock at night and never have a moment during that period of time. The men are in a specially arranged room and no one else is permitted to enter it without the consent of some member of the firm, who thereupon accompanies the visitor.

The polishing of the diamonds has required the manufacture of special instruments. A special "dop," as it is called, has been made, weighing about twenty pounds and measuring about six inches across. The mill used is of cast iron and steel and is fifteen and one-half inches across, making 2,150 revolutions a minute. The mill is lubricated with a preparation consisting of crushed diamond powder and oil and necessarily a large quantity is utilized. As the "dop" is so heavy, it is impossible to take the big diamond from the mill with the hand, as is usual, and therefore a special instrument has been made for the purpose. This mechanical device is so constructed that it works by foot power and raises the diamond from the mill.

That part of the stone which is being

Another true saying, amply verified by the weather of 1907, is "Thunder in spring cold will bring."

How true this is may be found by allowing the thoughts to travel back over a few years, and it will instantly occur to anyone who takes any intelligent interest in the weather that a spring with frequent thunderstorms in March and April is frequently (one might say always) followed by a cool May and June, with more thunderstorms, and a good deal of rain.

COST THOUSANDS OF LIVES.

Effect of a Telegraphic Error About a Flood in China.

How a telegraphic error was responsible for the loss of thousands of lives is told by a Shanghai correspondent. The disaster occurred during a freshet on the Han River in the beginning of April.

Owing to heavy rainfalls in the mountains in northwest Hupoh it frequently happens that a torrent of water rushes down the mountain-sides into the Han, a tributary of the great Yang-tse. Hitherto, warning of the freshets has been telegraphed from Siang-yang, 400 miles away from the mouth of the Han, and on receipt of the news men have been hurriedly sent out, equipped with guns, to warn the boats at the mouth of the river to find a safe anchorage.

On the evening of April 6 messengers were sent around with the news that a freshet, six feet high, was on its way down. The inhabitants and the boating population considered a six foot freshet to be of little consequence, and took no precautions whatever, believing that, as in former years, its arrival need not be expected for another twenty-four hours.

Unfortunately the telegram announcing the oncoming torrent was delayed for twenty-four hours and by an error in the wording the height was reduced from twenty-six feet to six feet. The freshet arrived at lightning speed at midnight on April 6. The night was pitch dark, the inhabitants were asleep.

Suddenly thousands of boats in the Han River were torn from their moorings and hurled together in a confused mass on the breast of a raging torrent. Deep ledon boats were sunk immediately, others were pounded to pieces and some catching fire lit up a scene of appalling destruction.

The people on shore were powerless to assist and the cries of the perishing "rent the heavens and were very painful to hear," as a native newspaper described it. Those boats that escaped the initial onset of the torrent were swept out into the Yang-tse, where a strong northeast gale completed the work of destruction.

Lifboats were sent out to the rescue, but could render little service. The terror of the night was increased by three huge junk which took fire and drifting toward the foreshore of the British settlement endangered the hulks moored along a front.

The native papers state that a small steamer, 700 large junks and innumerable small craft were destroyed. The loss of life, at first estimated at 2,000, probably exceeded double that number. Eighteen hundred bodies were picked up at one bend of the Yang-tse alone. A number of women and children are among the dead. Thirteen hundred mas's were recovered at the same spot.

HER REGRETS.

Mr. Timmid—"I don't suppose it would be proper for me to kiss you on such short acquaintance?"

Miss Ianit—"No, I suppose not; but isn't it too bad we haven't been acquainted longer?"

If there is one thing a garrulous man detests more than another it is a talkative woman.

to that I could go to sleep I have tried various familiar methods: I have got out of bed and stood up to make myself tired; I have recalled and dwelt on pleasant journeys; I have counted from one up to a million, more or less! I have said the alphabet backward over and over again; I have tried many things, but do you know what in my case I find most efficacious? It is a story that I tell to myself about how I am going to become comfortably rich, and thus free from all financial troubles.

"It took me a considerable time to build up this story in such shape that it just suited me, so that it seemed natural, like something that might have happened, you understand, and then I filled in the amount that was coming to me, making that enough so that the income from it would be sufficient to provide for all ordinary wants and as well for a few modest luxuries, including a little travel—a pleasant prospect to dwell upon. And by the time I had this story completely built up it took me some time to tell it to myself, with that snug little fortune that was to save me from all financial worry coming in at the end.

"And then when those money questions used to pounce on me after I'd gone to bed and threaten to keep me awake I'd start off and tell myself that story, as in truth I have done many times. And sometimes I'd have to tell it to myself two or three times over in succession to drive away the spectre and then again once would do, that money coming in at the end of it soothing me to sleep, and then I have sometimes not even been compelled to tell it all through once; I have fallen asleep before I had finished it, before I got the money, so sure was I that it was coming to me."

PARADISE FOR QUACKS.

Free Play in Sale of Patent Medicine in England.

Great Britain is the happy hunting ground of the medical quack, if one can believe a member of the Chemists' Association of London. He is quoted in Derrick's British Report as saying that two years ago the annual sale of proprietary medicines in Great Britain amounted to $10,000,000.

In the United States and in most European countries some legislation either exists or has been attempted to limit or stop the traffic in secret remedies. In England, absolute free play is given to it. It has been found expedient for the safety of the public to regulate the sale of poisons, but patent medicines, curiously enough, were exempt from the provisions of the law, a privilege which they enjoy together with legally qualified practitioners.

In most countries the dealing in medicinal drugs and chemicals is reserved only to persons qualified by training, studies and examination—that is, to pharmacists. In England, by a curious misunderstanding of the functions of a pharmacist, he is recognized by law merely as a "poison-seller," and any one who pleases may supply the public with medicines the identity or purity or therapeutic value of which he may be absolutely ignorant, and by the simple device of packing them as a medicine and keeping the composition secret he is able by means of advertisement, to substitute himself for competent and qualified service.

They were parting at the door. She stood folded in his arms, stroking his moustache, while he looked into her eyes of blue.

For a time no sound was heard, save the gentle smack of their colliding lips.

At length, she said, "George, dearest, do you know why I love you so well?"

"No, darling. Why?"

"Because when you kiss me you remind me so much of my poor dear little poodle that died last summer."

Now she wonders why he broke off the engagement and went west.

A good many men have the courage of their convictions simply because they have never been convicted.

DENIZENS OF THE ROCK.

Monkeys Are Protected by Martial Law at Gibraltar.

A recent periodical gives a picture of "Major," the chief of the highly prized and carefully protected tribe of Barbary apes which inhabit the Rock of Gibraltar. "Better kill the governor himself than Major" is a saying of the fortress. There are only about twenty left of this band of monkeys, which in some mysterious manner came over from Africa many years ago and claimed citizenship in Europe. They are protected by martial law, and any addition by birth to their number is carefully chronicled and announced in the local paper.

The apes change their place of residence from the highest peaks of the rock to lower and more sheltered portions, and back again, according to the state of the weather. They show their sense of humor by throwing stones at the soldiers, but they are often not seen for weeks at a time, save in the early morning. One visitor to Gibraltar did not get a glimpse of them at all. In "A Summer in Spain," published in 1874, Mrs. Ramsay says:

"We did not see the monkeys. If we went up in the morning they kept hidden until noon. If we went in the afternoon every monkey had taken its walk early in the day. Once we were told that a large ape had just been sitting on the gun we were leaning against. One of our friends saw seven large ones and two babies. The mothers put the little ones down and made them jump about."

A few years ago, on account of the diminishing numbers of these animals, some apes were procured from Barbary and turned loose upon the rock. But resident monkeys instantly killed them all. Although so fierce to intruders of their own kind, they never attack human beings, and are greatly beloved and esteemed.

ON MAKING FRIENDS.

Do you ever stop to think of how many friends you have? No? Well, it's a good idea to do so now and then. The art of making friends is well worth acquiring. Just sit down and count up how many friends you have gained during the last year, and how many you have lost. The result may be astonishing. People drift apart so quickly in these days. Absorption in business is one reason for this; another is the modern dislike of writing letters; and a third a tendency—particularly with the passing of years—to become too self-centred. All these things prevent us making new friends, as well as helping us to lose old ones. Determine to prevent this. It is easy. Look for likable qualities in those you meet, and you will find them. Don't be too cautious about your acquaintances, thus shutting out much pleasure in life. Finally, when you meet someone who is inclined to be friendly to you, be ready to do your part, and it will be plain sailing.

with the hand, as is usual, and therefore a special instrument has been made for the purpose. This mechanical device is so constructed that it works by foot power and raises the diamond from the mill.

PURE DIAMOND OF 500 CARATS.

That part of the stone which is being prepared for King Edward will be between five and six hundred carats in weight and of the purest color, said Mr. Asscher. Then he told of the extraordinary precautions observed to guard such a precious possession.

"The diamond," he said, "is kept in the strong room of our new factory and is guarded day and night by four armed policemen. This strong room is on the ground floor of the factory and the walls of it are three-quarters of a yard thick and of strong iron. The door can be opened only by a combination of numbers, which is known to no one but three members of the firm."

"Once the door is opened a strong, iron barred door is displayed to view, and this has to be unlocked before the strong room can be entered. At the left of the room there is a mahogany cupboard of ordinary appearance, with two handles, but with no locks visible. There are, however, nine locks behind the sliding panel. The door of the safe is eight inches thick and it conceals two safes, in one of which the Cullinan diamond reposes at night."

"We observe still further precautions, however. The head of the firm, accompanied by no fewer than ten men, takes the diamond to its secure resting place for the night and returns it to the working room in the morning. There is a small patent recording clock outside the strong room and it is the duty of the night watchman to make a certain mark on this clock every half hour, and he must live up to this duty to the second, despite the fact that the armed policemen are on patrol throughout the building every moment of the night."

TOUCHED BY VACATION FEVER.

Mr. Glimmerton Defines the Difference Between Two Familiar Words.

"I haven't looked it up in the dictionary," said Mr. Glimmerton, "but I should say that the difference between tired and weary was something like this: A man is tired when he has worked hard, and weary when he's tired of work."

"And it's a feeling of weariness that comes over me now. I feel good, first rate; and I sleep well and eat well; life looks pleasant to me; but I don't feel a bit like sawing wood. In fact the wood pile is repellent if not downright repulsive to me. What I want to do, to be perfectly frank with you, is to turn my back on the woodpile and get out and loaf."

"Not idly, you understand. I don't want to go to sleep; about what I'd like to do is go somewhere far from the woodpile and lie down where I could hear the winds sigh and see the clouds go by and dream. The woods beckon me, and I kiss the lakes and streams and the seashore, and nature smiles over all; and I want to go away from here, and that's what I call being weary."

"I suppose it's the summer vacation microbe that has got in my blood; it always affects me that way, and now I'm positively downright weary, though fortunately not too tired to work; and so it's back to the woodpile once more for me, to be content with reading the literature and the time-tables till it's time for me to go."

RUSSIA'S NEW WATERWAY.

Russia is contemplating the construction of a huge new waterway across Siberia, nearly parallel with the course of the Trans-Siberian Railway. It is proposed to connect five great Siberian rivers, the Tobol, Ishim, Irtysh, Ob and Yenetssei, and other less important streams, by canals or light railways, and with a view of this the Russian Government has ordered extensive surveys to be taken.

MURDER IN RAILWAY CAMP

Serious Stabbing Affray at Reynold's Construction Camp at Iroquois Falls.

A despatch from Haileybury, Ont., says: Word has reached here of a serious stabbing affray at Reynold's construction camp at Iroquois Falls, about 120 miles north of here, on Saturday night. As a result Fritz Young, a boatman of Stanhope, Quebec, is dead of his wounds, and Thomas S. Wright, a foreman in the employ of the Reynolds Co., is under arrest, charged with murder. Two other men from the camp, Michael Morris and James Quinn, are also under arrest, charged with aiding and abetting Wright in the murder of Young. The three prisoners are now awaiting trial, and are confined in the jail at New Liskeard.

The affair is said to have started with some words between Young and Wright over the former having left two boats up the river instead of bringing them down to the camp again with him. Wright is said to have come out of the tent to where the other two men, Quinn and Morris, were sitting and told them he would knife Young with a new knife he had purchased that day. The men urged Wright to fight him with his fists instead, and they all three returned to the tent, where the fight, in which they all took part, ensued. A cook, a Frenchman named Briss-on, was in the tent and managed to separate the men, but when he went to lift Young to put him out of the tent he found that the man was bleeding profusely from a knife wound in the stomach.

Young begged to be taken to McDouglas Chutes, where he could be attended to by a doctor, so the men wrapped him up in a blanket and started in a heavy rainstorm in a boat for the Chutes at about 9 o'clock on Saturday night. About five miles up the river they decided to camp for the night. Young was in too serious a condition to be moved, so they left him in the boat. When they returned next morning they found the man was dead.

CATTLE MARKET.

Toronto, June 9.—The quality of the offerings lately has been very good compared with what was on the market a few weeks ago. A number of very choice export cattle sold at $6.15 to $6.35. Fairly good exporters brought from $5.75 to $6. The best butchers as a rule did not sell for more than $5.70, but in a few cases $5.80 was paid. Good loads of butchers' brought $5.20 to $5.50.

Milk cows are a little off, as the enquiry for them is not quite so active.

Sheep and lambs are quoted lower again, but found fairly ready sale at the reduced prices. Calves are also lower, or large offerings. The hog market is still unchanged, although the receipts were very heavy. During the hot weather farmers find it safer to sell their hogs alive, rather than dressed, which fact is responsible for the light receipts of dressed, and the heavy receipts of live hogs.

ASSISTANCE IN DRAINAGE.

Farm Drainage Demonstrations by the Ontario Agricultural College.

The Department of Physics at the Ontario Agricultural College desires to announce the continuance of its previous offer of assistance to farmers in matters pertaining to drainage. For the past three years we have been authorized by the Minister of Agriculture to go out and assist any farmers in taking the levels of his lands for drainage purposes, in planning the most advantageous systems of drains, and in calculating the grades and sizes of tile for the different drains. A finished map bearing all the information is sent to the owner. This serves two purposes: first, it is used as a guide in constructing the drains; second, it may be preserved as a record of the exact location of every drain, so that if for any reason it should be necessary in years to come to find any drain it could be done accurately at a moment's notice.

The number of applications for assistance has increased very rapidly, so that last year we had many more than we could attend to. To enable us to meet this increased demand the Minister of Agriculture has this year given us a special appropriation whereby we have been enabled to double our staff for this work.

A new feature is being added. We have found in the past that frequently the neighbors in the vicinity of the farm being surveyed were interested and wished to observe the operations. This suggested the desirability of making these demonstrations public, and this will be done wherever possible. Anyone interested will be welcome on all occasions. By this means we shall be able to instruct a much larger number in matters pertaining to drainage problems.

Anyone wishing drainage surveying done should apply to Wm. H. Day, Department of Physics, O.A.C., Guelph. The only outlay connected with the work is the travelling expenses of one man, including meals, cartage of instruments, and railway fare at one cent a mile each way.

The Department has just issued a new pamphlet on "Farm Drainage Operations," which may be had on application.

A HOSPITAL ROMANCE.

Toronto Nurse Weds a Wealthy Philadelphian.

A despatch from New York says: Touched by the sympathy and solicitude shown by Miss Mabel Ireland, formerly of Toronto, Canada, assistant superintendent in Dr. Bull's Sanitarium, 33 East 33rd street, to his wife, who was operated on in that institution four years ago, Charles Burgh of Philadelphia cultivated an acquaintance with the pretty nurse, which ripened into love and resulted on Wednesday in their marriage in "The Little Church Around the Corner." Miss Ireland, at the time they met, was a new nurse on the hospital staff. She cared for Mrs. Burgh until her death, winning the respect of the husband by her cheerfulness and kindness. The acquaintance begun at the bedside was renewed later, and at Christmas time Mr. Burgh won the consent of the young nurse to become his wife. They were married on Wednesday by Rev. Mr. Houghton. There was a wedding breakfast at the Park Avenue Hotel, and Mr. and Mrs. Burgh went to the Hotel Belmont until their sailing on Thursday on the Hamburg-American Liner Amerika. Their honeymoon will extend over nearly all Europe, including a lengthy stay in Sweden. On their return in the fall they will live in Philadelphia, where Mr. Burgh is President of the Commercial Coal Company.

LIGHTNING IN BRITAIN.

Several Persons Killed During a Terrific Storm.

A despatch from London, England, says: London was visited on Thursday by one of the severest thunderstorms that are remembered in the city. For at least four hours the lightning never ceased flashing, but London, which is nearly always peculiarly lucky in this respect, escaped the torrential rains which flooded the Thames valley and the hail which caused so much havoc in the neighborhood of Epping. Stones as large as big nuts smashed the wind was of great violence and ruined plants. There was hardly a house or shop which did not have two or three windows smashed. The railway embankment at Grand n. Staffordshire, was demolished. The railway station at Rosky, also in Staffordshire, was struck by lightning and burned down. The fire brigade of Telford was kept busy owing to the number of houses being set on fire by lightning. The railway bridge on the Cambridge railway was washed away, a brewery at Margate was split in two and about a score of factory smoke stacks were thrown down. An entire flock of sheep and lambs was reported killed in Derbyshire. In several parts of the Midlands people were killed, but the complete death roll has not yet been ascertained.

The 33rd annual statement of The Imperial Bank of Canada, just issued, which will be found in another column, denotes successful management, and is one well calculated to increase public confidence in this institution. The net profits for the year ended April 30th amount to $721,175 and this, added to the balance of $426,316 carried forward from last year, and $197,809 premium received on new stock issued makes $1,345,299, which has been disposed of as follows: Four quarterly dividends at the rate of 11% per annum paid to shareholders, $535,524; transferred to reserve account, $191,809; written off bank premises, $26,652; special appropriation applied in writing down bank investments, $100,000, and the substantial balance of $475,914 carried forward to next year.

HUDSON'S BAY RAILWAY

Government May Make Arrangements With the Canadian Northern Railway.

A despatch from Ottawa says: It is understood that, in lieu of Government construction and ownership of the proposed new Hudson Bay Railway, as originally suggested, it is the intention of the Government now to secure the construction of the road and control of rates in an equally effective manner by entering into an arrangement with the C. N. R. to complete the construction of their present line towards Hudson Bay from the Pas to Fort Churchill. The C. N. R. Hudson Bay line is now completed to the Pas, a distance of 48 miles from Fort Churchill, and a general survey of the rest of the route to the terminus has been made. The Government's plan, it is stated, is to give a liberal cash bonus to the Canadian Northern Railway Company to complete the road and to guarantee a portion of the bonds. In return the country will secure control of rates on the road, running rights for all other roads over it, and the opening up of a vast new territory of nearly 100-million acres of good land. No land grant will be made to the company, but the cash bonus will probably be somewhat over the usual $6,400 per mile.

CROPS LOOKING SPLENDID

Everything Points to Increased Returns for the Western Farmer.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Mr. W. G. Matthews, General Manager of R. G. Dun & Company, reached Winnipeg on Wednesday, returning from his annual trip of inspection through the west, and gives a most encouraging statement concerning his observations. He says: "In the coast cities I found wholesale trade very good; in fact, most of the dealers there said their sales were up to last year's, but the retailers are complaining of drier times, and the lumber interests are very much depressed. Many of the large mills are shut down entirely, while some of them are running on short time. They are all looking forward with a great deal of interest to the crop in the three western Provinces here, and they are very hopeful in consequence of the excellent conditions at present.

"Prospects of the fruit crop there are good. This is becoming a very important part of the business situation.

"In Calgary and Edmonton trade was better than I expected to find it. The crops all through the territory I have been over are looking splendid. Conditions have been very favorable for getting in the seed; rains in the western Provinces have come earlier than usual this year, and all they want is warm weather now to produce what they all think will be a bumper crop. The acreage is largely increased, and everything points to increased returns for the farmer."

PENNY POSTAGE TO STATES

Arrangements Have Been Completed Between Britain and the United States.

A despatch from Washington says: Postmaster-General Meyer announced on Wednesday that an agreement had been reached with the British Government providing for a letter postage of two cents an ounce between the United States and Great Britain and Ireland, to become operative Oct. 1, 1908. He stated further that the British Postmaster-General, Sydney Buxton, was making a like announcement to the House of Commons on the same day.

Postmaster-General Meyer believes that this reduction in the rate of postage in the United Kingdom ultimately will result in an increase in receipts, because it has always been found that a lower letter rate resulted in increasing the revenue. He is also of the opinion that a lower postage will lead to increased mercantile intercourse. Our manufacturers are increasing their sales in England, and must rely to a great extent on the mails for orders and increase in trade.

"Further," he stated, "this will be a great boon to our adopted English-speaking citizens and their connection here, particularly those of limited means as it will enable them to keep up a correspondence with their relatives and friends in the Old Country at domestic rates."

ANNOUNCED IN BRITISH HOUSE.

A despatch from London says: Penny postage between Britain and the United States, effective on October 1st, was announced by Postmaster-General Buxton in the House of Commons on Wednesday. He expressed his confidence that this reduction would greatly increase the commercial intercourse and the mutual good feelings already existing between the two countries. The announcement of the Postmaster-General was greeted with hearty cheering.

The victims were both employed in the black powder mill, where the explosion occurred. The dead are: Baptiste Ropierre, Vaudeville; and A. Sagalin, of Ile Perrott. Both were middle-aged men, and were married. The building in which the explosion occurred was completely wrecked, the roof being blown off and the walls shattered. Fortunately, it was completely isolated from the other buildings of the plant. The two victims were the only men at work in the vicinity. The other buildings of the plant contained hundreds of workmen. The shock of the explosion was tremendous. It shattered windows in farm houses all over the island.

BRIDE WAITED, GROOM CAME NOT. Cut His Throat Exactly at the Wedding Hour.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Alexander Scott, a young foreman of the Winnipeg Paint and Glass Company, committed suicide in his room on Wednesday night by cutting his throat. Scott was to have been married to an estimable young lady in this city, and the wedding was to have taken place at eight o'clock Wednesday evening. The guests had assembled at the house of the bride, but as Scott did not put in an appearance at the appointed hour, the bride's brother and one of the guests started for his lodging-house to learn what was keeping the bridegroom. They found Scott lying on the bed dead. He had done the deed at the exact hour the wedding was to have taken place. The only motive that can be suggested is financial straits and mental derangement.

WHOLE FAMILY ASPHYXIATED. Mother and Three Children Dead in Chicago.

The company broke up at about 10 o'clock, and from that time until Wednesday, when the bodies were found by neighbors, nothing was seen or heard of them. A rubber tube which conveyed gas to a small cooking stove was found detached, and it is supposed that it slipped off during the night, the house filling with gas.

Most of the victims are said to have been on route to the naval academy to participate in the graduation ball on Friday night.

EIGHT RIVER DRIVERS PERISH. Boat in Which They Were Returning Went to Pieces.

A despatch from Fredericton, N. B., says: Eight men employed on W. J. Noble's drive for the Cushing Company were drowned by the breaking of a bateau while they were shooting the rapids at the mouths of the Big Black River on Tuesday. The victims were residents of the St. Basil District, in Madawaska. They had secured an old bateau, and were on their way home after the drive.

beauty, the naval demonstration of an impressiveness not heretofore realized. Quebec will be filled to repletion by thousands from England and the United States, and tens of thousands from Canada, but fully ten million of people will wish to be present, and cannot find hotel accommodation.

One of the greatest matters of anxiety to those organizing the celebration has been the question, how to provide the millions of people who cannot see the celebration with illustrations and descriptions, to give the scenes of grandeur to the world in their entirety.

Arrangements have been completed by The Standard of Montreal, now recognized as the National Illustrated paper of Canada, to issue what will be known as "The Standard Tercentenary Number," published by George Murray Publishing Company, Montreal. We have had the privilege of examining the proofs of some of the gorgeous supplements to go with The Standard. They eclipse in interest, in fidelity of detail, in beauty of color and execution, anything ever attempted in Canada, and will bring the Tercentenary celebration right into the homes of those lucky enough to procure a copy.

To connoisseurs The Standard Tercentenary Number is one that expert judges would think could not be sold under $2.50, and yet it is to be published at 50 cents. It will be practically the only Tercentenary Souvenir. The publishers announce that orders are being now looked, and all orders mailed on or before June 20th to June 25th will be certain to be filled. After that date the public must take their chance, first come, first served.

Where orders remitted for cannot be filled, remittance will be refunded. The Publishers of The Standard, 171 St. James Street, Montreal, have gained a continental reputation for their publication. The coming issue, to illustrate the Tercentenary Celebration, will certainly be the most interesting thing of the kind ever produced on this Continent. We predict that in one month after the celebration it will be in demand at even ten dollars a copy.

They cannot begin to issue enough to meet a demand that will be phenomenal. It is a pleasure to testify to the value of a thing of surpassing merit.—Exchange.

WALTER SMALL'S DEATH. The Postmaster of Hardisty, Alberta, Shoots Himself.

A despatch from Edmonton says: Postmaster Walter Small of Hardisty shot himself on Wednesday night at a station where he was waiting for the incoming mail. As far as can be learned no one witnessed the affair, but a large number were on the spot almost immediately and found the deceased lying face down with a revolver beside him. It is not known whether or not it was accidental. The deceased had just lately retired from the firm of Erskine & Small in order to give his whole attention to the post-office.

Mexico City, June 4.—Word has just reached this city that twenty lives were lost this afternoon and property damaged to the extent of $20,000 by a cloudburst in Jucanabato. It is said one of the main tunnels has been flooded.

OIL STOVE FIRED HOUSE. Prince Edward County Family Had to Leap from Windows.

A despatch from Picton says: The home of Robert Brown, Milford, was totally destroyed on Wednesday by a fire which resulted from the explosion of a coal oil stove, lit by Mr. Brown early in the morning. The family awoke to find the house in flames, and had to jump from the windows.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETIES. Personal Probation System Will be the Next Step.

There has been some excellent work done by the Children's Aid Societies of Ontario during the past year, and the entire Province is rapidly being covered by a network of organizations aiming at the betterment of child life. In 1906 there were 50 societies, while during 1907 the number advanced to 67 with many smaller societies and committees doing occasional work. The interest and enthusiasm of the various officers, and the loyal co-operation of hundreds of the directors and members, has an onerous and exacting position most pleasant and inspiring. In Ottawa the Society has taken up probation work and successfully demonstrated its possibilities, bringing such kindly individual influence to bear on each delinquent child as to effectually save about ninety-eight per cent. Other societies are following and the general introduction of this personal probation system will be the next great advance step. In addition to the Secretary and agent there are two well-known ladies employed as probation agents, and there are weekly meetings of the probation committee at which each child's case is carefully considered and volunteer workers give valuable assistance by studying the home, and becoming personally acquainted with the boy and family. The Children's Aid Societies make a study of trunkeys, playgrounds, probation, housing conditions, street life of children, attendance of young children at theatres, and other problems closely affecting the child life of the community. The executive work should not be delegated to one individual who in a large city cannot possibly cover one-quarter of the work pressing for attention.—J. J. Keso.

RUSHING TELEPHONE WORK. Manitoba Government Awards Contracts for Supplies.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Contracts have been awarded by the Government Telephone Department for poles, lines, supplies and construction work to be carried on in the province this year. The total amount set aside for this work is $500,000.

FORTY LUGGERS WERE LOST Great Typhoon Struck the West Australian Pearling Fleet.

A despatch from Victoria, B. C., says: Bringing news of an unprecedented disaster to the pearling fleet off West Australia, involving the loss of 40 luggers and 270 lives in a typhoon, the Canadian-Australian Liner Manuka arrived on Wednesday afternoon. The disaster to the fleet of the pearling luggers occurred near Thursday Island, a typhoon striking the fleet just as it was starting for the pearling grounds, scattering the vessels, completely wrecking some and driving others ashore. About twenty Australian pearlers were lost. The other victims were Malays, Manila men, Japanese and Kanakas. The survivors reported harrowing experiences, some having been picked up in the last stages of exhaustion, after having cut away their masts and having been clinging to the wrecked hull, while sharks followed, waiting for the exhausted men to drop from the wreckage. Many were rescued by the steamer Paroo, sent from Broome as a relief steamer. The bodies of some of the victims were eaten by sharks. The beach near Broome presents a terrible sight, covered with wreckage and bodies.

At any rate, you seem to be getting rid of it on auction-sale principles: "going, going, g-o-n-e!" Stop the auction with Ayer's Hair Vigor. It certainly checks falling hair; no mistake about this. owner of a number of claims, notably one upon Christmas Creek. In this connection it must be observed that Mr. Pringle was the discoverer of gold on this creek, and as the fortunate circumstance took place on Christmas day, Mr. Pringle named the creek Christmas Creek.

Here we have a gentleman whose presence in Yukon was supposed to be in the interests of home missions, employing his time in searching for gold, and his name appears in the public records as the owner of several other mining claims.

Politically Mr. Pringle was also ambitious. He stumped the creeks, requesting nominations for the Yukon Council. He publicly stated that if elected he would bring about reforms and denounce immoral public servants. Well, he was elected, and for a year he was a member of the council, and during that time he sat next to Messrs. Lithgow and Girouard, also members of the council, and never once questioned their morality, neither did he make any reflections upon the purity of their private lives.

This gentleman therefore cannot be regarded so much as a minister as a politician and gold seeker, and it is in this light that his communications must be regarded.

Disappointed Politician.

Mr. Pringle is a soured and disappointed politician. He sought, but failed to secure a second nomination for the Yukon Council, and afterwards he sought and failed to secure the nomination to the Dominion House, and his last failure was with regard to the pulpit of the church which he temporarily occupied. The people of Dawson did not regard his services as of any permanent value, and they declined to respond to his application, and it is now understood that Pringle proposes to take the stump on Yukon affairs at the approaching elections in the Conservative interest. Should this be the case, Mr. Pringle will encounter men who have crossed swords with him in Yukon, and he will not be able to repeat such wild allegations as appear in the correspondence between himself and members of the Government.

Some Wild Assertions.

The statement was made in the House that Pringle, in some sense, was the mouthpiece of the people of Yukon. There never was a greater mistake made. Pringle wrote his letters without the knowledge of any other person in Yukon. Neither does it appear that he took the advice of, or consulted with any people of Yukon with regard to the matters in question.

Among the men whom he describes as of bad reputation and members of the gang are found the names of gentlemen occupying high positions of trust in the Yukon, one of them was the editor of the leading paper in the country, who took a prominent part in all matters of public interest, both in the columns of his paper and on the public platform, and another is an official of the very church in which Pringle was "supplying" for it must not be forgotten that Pringle was not attached to any church as a pastor. As to the first gentleman mentioned, Pringle would not have dared to mention his name in any sense reflecting upon his personal character, if the gentlemen had been within reach, Pringle having had experience of the ability of the gentleman to take care of himself. As to the other gentleman, when the matter comes to his knowledge, he will be heard from. This man is one of the wealthiest and most respected citizens of the country and he may be surprised to know that at the time Pringle was writing letters to the Prime Minister, in which he refer-

COMMON SENSE

Leads most intelligent people to use only medicines of known composition. Therefore it is that Dr. Pierce's medicines, the makers of which print every ingredient entering into them upon the bottle wrappers and attest its correctness under oath, are daily growing in favor. The composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is open to everybody. Dr. Pierce being desirous of having the search light of investigation turned fully upon his formulae, being confident that the better the composition of these medicines is known the more will their great curative merits be recognized. Being wholly made of the active medicinal principles extracted from native forest roots, by exact processes original with Dr. Pierce, and without the use of a drop of alcohol, triple-refined and chemically pure glycerine being used instead in extracting and preserving the curative virtues residing in the roots employed, these medicines are entirely free from the objection of doing harm by creating an appetite for either alcoholic beverages or habit-forming drugs. Examine the formula on their bottle wrappers—the same as sworn to by Dr. Pierce, and you will find that his "Golden Medical Discovery," the great, blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages (no medicine will do that) yet does cure all those catarrhal conditions of head and throat, weak stomach, torpid liver and bronchial troubles, weak lungs and hang-over coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated lead up to and finally terminate in consumption.

Take the "Golden Medical Discovery" in time and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial. Don't expect miracles. It won't do supernatural things. You must exercise your patience and persevere in its use for a reasonable length of time to get

The Prime Minister properly said that the Pringle charges were so indefinite that there was nothing to investigate. The fact is that the Prime Minister has other sources of information than Rev. Pringle and he knows much more about Pringle than Pringle thinks he does.

The fact was that the Minister of Interior gave Mr. Pringle every opportunity to formulate his charges but when brought face to face with the position, he declined to proceed with his charges. This was the farcical ending to the whole business.

The main facts to be remembered with regard to the Pringle charges are:

Wanted Every Office.

First—Pringle first made charges against Yukon officials before he saw the country, and afterwards withdrew them.

Second—Pringle is a gold mining speculator, and the owner of a claim on Christmas Creek, which he found when he should have been preaching.

Third—Pringle was elected as a member of the Yukon Council upon his promise to denounce the policy of the Government, and the immorality of Yukon officials.

Fourth—After his election Pringle supported the Government, did not denounce their policy, and make no charges against public officials, and accepted patronage.

Fifth—Pringle's constituents in mass meeting passed resolutions denouncing his course, and calling upon him to resign.

Sixth—Pringle sat in Council with Lithgow and Girouard, and took nat-

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had. For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

"ALL DEALERS"

Dr. Reid, Conservative member of Grenville, also had a yacht repaired at the Government dock, but had not paid the bill.

These papers were called for by Dr. Reid, and he little thought that when he asked for them that the committee would light on a scandal which may result in very serious consequences to himself. It appears that Dr. Reid also obtained use of an engine belonging to the Department of Marine and Fisheries and that an acetylene tank had been put in a certain position for the purpose of supplying gas to starch works with which Dr. Reid is connected. The Opposition at once objected to any evidence being taken on this matter. Had the gentleman involved been a Liberal, there would have been no objection.

Obstruction Now a Science.

Seven months of the session have nearly gone and the business before the House now is of the greatest importance to the country, but in consequence of the obstruction by the Opposition, little or no business has been done. It is true that occasionally some estimates are passed, but the system of obstruction is maintained to an extent that practically paralyzes the business of the country. Every time the house is moved into supply the Opposition brings forward some controversial question, and hours are spent discussing something of no importance whatever. The Pringle matter was eight years old, and for three months the papers have been on the table and no use made of them until the idea of obstruction arose, and then these papers were dragged in and long letters and replies were read to the House, which consumed nearly the whole of a day's sitting, and thus the time is wasted, and the people pay the piper.

Yukon the Sufferer.

Yukon has probably suffered more from the writings of irresponsible men who misrepresented the conditions than any other part of Canada. The mania for writing letters appears to have possessed a certain class of people whose time would have been better occupied in attending to their own affairs. As Hon. Mr. Oliver very well put it: "It is not sufficient to say that because a statement is made by a minister of the Gospel, it is absolute evidence that it is in all parts and points absolutely correct." Wholesale allegations of a general character are neither reliable nor convincing and the Government took the correct position by saying that in the absence of any specific charge there was nothing calling for the intervention of

MAN WITHOUT A SOUL

The Uncanny Creation of Mary Godwin Shelley.

MONSTER OF FRANKENSTEIN.

The Interesting History of an Earlier Day Novel That is Frequently Alluded to in Literature and at Times Quoted Incorrectly.

Everybody, or nearly everybody, has heard of the novel of "Frankenstein," though it is not probable that many persons read it nowadays. There are so many allusions to it in our literature, however, that one absorbs some sort of notion of it so that he cannot help knowing that it is a weird and ghastly story about a monster, but whether or not Frankenstein is the monster even well informed people do not always know, showing that they never read the story.

Sometimes we hear allusions to "Frankenstein's monster," as in one of Charles Sumner's orations, where he speaks of the "soulless monster of Frankenstein, the wretched creation of mortal science without God," and sometimes the reference is to Frankenstein only, as if he were the monster. Of course Sumner, who was very particular in his use of figures of speech, was right. When Mrs. Deland in her novel of "Sidney" makes Major Lee say that "Christianity is a Frankenstein" she suffers the major to talk nonsense.

The story of this weird novel and the circumstances under which it came to be written are decidedly interesting and may be told in a few words. The facts are as follows:

In 1816 Mary Godwin, afterward Mrs. Shelley, eloped with Shelley, and they took up their residence near Geneva, in Switzerland. They had Lord Byron for a neighbor, and the three passed much time together. Their conversation frequently ran on the occult and the mysterious, and Byron one day proposed that each should write a ghost story. All agreed and went to work, but it was not long before the two poets gave it up as a hopeless task. They could write poetry, but they could not write stories.

Mary persevered and completed her tale in the spring of 1817. When Byron and Shelley heard it read they were surprised and delighted. It was

A TALE OF THE SEA.

The Upside Down Cruise of the Captain of the Erndte.

An almost incredible instance of the perils attending those who go to sea was the basis of a story told in a maritime court of Dantzic some years ago by the captain of the sailing ship Erndte. Nothing that Jules Verne, Clark Russell and H. G. Wells ever fancied in their wonderful tales surpassed the story told by Captain Engelland.

He had sailed from Memel with a cargo of planks for Oldenburg. The captain remained at the wheel during a gale which overtook the vessel next night and at 4 in the morning went to his cabin to change his wet clothes.

He had just got into dry underclothing when his vessel capsized, and he found himself standing on the roof of the cabin, the door of which the sea had hermetically closed.

By loosening the boards of what was now the roof he got into the hold, which contained only loose sails. Fortunately some shelves of a high cupboard remained intact, and from them he collected some cans of condensed milk, some prunes, rice, sugar and sausage. He also found a hammer.

For twelve days the master of the ship lived in his prison, eating as sparingly as possible and drinking sea water, which appeared to have no ill effect on him. He employed his free time in hammering on the steel bottom of the ship to attract the attention of passing vessels. He knew when it was day, for a dim light penetrated the water.

On the twelfth day the Norwegian steamer Aurora sighted the wreck and sent a boat to take it in tow. Engelland had fallen asleep; but, hearing footsteps over his head, he began knocking with his hammer and shouting for help. The Aurora's men returned to their ship for tools, with which they bored a hole through the bottom of the Erndte where they had heard the shouting. When they drew out their drill, a man's finger followed, and they soon learned that Engelland had food for four days more and wished to be towed to land, for it was impossible to release him in the open sea.

The Aurora towed the wreck safely to Neufahrwasser, where with considerable difficulty it was attached to a huge crane, a plate was unloosened, and the imprisoned master was freed. He was perfectly conscious and even able to walk alone. The three men who had constituted his crew were of course drowned when the vessel capsized.

A Great Chance.

If one feels dull and spiritless, in the spring or early summer, try it! "Spring Fever." But there is no fever usually. It is the after effect of our winter habits. The nerves are mostly at fault. Tired, worn-out nerves leave us languid, lifeless, and without spirit or ambition. A few doses of Dr. Shoop's Restorative will also, and quickly change all of these depressing symptoms. The Restorative of course won't bring you back to full health in a day or two, but it will do enough in 15 hours to satisfy you that the remedy is reaching that "tired spot." Druggists everywhere are advising its use as a specific and prompt general tonic. It gives more vim and more spirit to the system than any other known nerve or constitutional tonic. It sharpens a failing appetite, aids digestion, frees sluggish bowels and kidneys, and brings new life, strength and ambition. Test it a few days and be convinced. Sold by—ALL DEALERS.

THE GREAT SKIN-CURE

mediately sent to London for publication and met with a great success.

Frankenstein is a Swiss youth, a student at the University of Ingolstadt, deeply interested in the study of chemistry and natural philosophy. He resolves to penetrate the mysteries of life and death and wrest from nature the secret of creation. After prolonged study he succeeds and discovers how to impart movement and animation to lifeless matter.

He then resolves to mold a colossal man, making him beautiful in form and feature and imbue him with life. He carries on his work in a studio far from the habitations of man, labors long and secretly, and at last the work is completed. There in the great room lies the form and semblance of a human being, perfect in all his proportions. Frankenstein relates the story:

"It was on a dreary night in November that I beheld the accomplishment of my toils. With an anxiety that almost amounted to agony I collected the instruments of life around me that I might infuse a spark of being into the lifeless thing that lay at my feet.

"It was already 1 o'clock in the morning. The rain pattered dismally against the window panes and my candle was nearly burned out when, by the glimmer of the half extinguished light, I saw the dull yellow eye of the creature open. It breathed hard, and a convulsive motion agitated its limbs."

Slowly the immense creature arose, and the artist, frightened at his own work, fled away. Then he returns to find his creation possessed of life and every attribute of humanity except a soul. Nowhere can it find human sympathy. It is out of harmony with all things about it, and after searching the world in pursuit of happiness it returns again to Frankenstein and demands that he make a companion with whom it can live in sympathy and love.

Frankenstein declines, and thenceforth the monster pursues him with hatred and revenge. It slays his brothers and sister, his friend and his bride. It follows him to Russia, to Siberia and into the Arctic ocean, and there creature and artist perish together. It is a most uncanny story to read of nights.

Sir Walter Scott reviewed the novel in the Quarterly, but, while admitting its power, confessed he did not like it. "Our taste and our judgment revolt at this kind of writing." All the critics agreed as to its daring originality.—Exchange.

Tactful.

A musical conductor was trying the voice of a young woman who wished to secure a place in an opera troupe. The manager was standing by. The candidate was frail and timid. She finished her song with an air of distress.

"How is it?" asked the manager unceremoniously.

The conductor caught the pleading eyes of the girl, but he had his duty to perform. He struck three notes on the piano and left the rest to the manager. The three notes were B A D.

A Bit of Tact.

"Do you say you paid a compliment to that hideous and spiteful baroness? I didn't think you could be so insincere."

"I merely told her that her face was as beautiful as her heart."

First Gentleman (bitterly)—Well, my feelings have changed. Any time you want to fight let me know.

Settled the Ownership.

"There was a quaint old judge who used to live in the Pine Tree State," said a lawyer. "One of his decisions gained him the title of the 'Maine Solomon.' Two women came before this magistrate with a fine, fat pullet, each declaring that it belonged to herself. The magistrate from his high seat frowned heavily at the first woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Jones?' he asked her. 'No, indeed, it don't, sir,' she replied. Then he turned to the other woman. 'Does this pullet belong to Mrs. Smith?' 'It certainly does not,' the second woman replied.

"The pullet," the magistrate then decreed, "does not belong to Mrs. Jones, nor does it belong to Mrs. Smith. The pullet is mine. Janitor, take it round to the house and give it to my cook!"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" SAVED HIS LIFE

Mr. Dingwall was Superintendent of St. Andrews Sunday School in Williams town for nine years and License Commissioner for Glengarry — and Tax Collector for Charlottetown—for fourteen years continuously. Read how strongly Mr. Dingwall comes out in favor of "Fruit-a-tives."

Williamstown, Ont., April 5th., 1907.

I have much pleasure in testifying to the almost marvellous benefit I have derived from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I was a life long sufferer from Chronic Constipation and the only medicine I ever secured to do me any real good was "Fruit-a-tives." This medicine cured me when everything else failed. Also, last spring, I had a severe attack of bladder trouble with kidney trouble, and "Fruit-a-tives" cured these complaints for me, when the physician attending me had practically given me up. I am now over eighty years of age and I can strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" for Chronic Constipation and bladder and kidney trouble. This medicine is mild like fruit, is easy to take, but most effective in action.

A Strong Maid.

A cooking expert tells this story: "Only the other night, dining with some friends of mine, I saw a maid drop and break a superb platter that contained two roast canvasback ducks. Our host did not permit this accident to ruffle him. While we waited for some other course to be substituted for the last one he said: 'You must excuse that maid. These accidents happen almost daily with her. I think it is a disease. She was, I believe, a dairy-maid originally, but she had to abandon that occupation on account of her inability to handle the cows without breaking their horns.'"

AN INDIAN ATTACK.

One in Which Custer and a New York Broker Were Mixed Up.

Charles Osborn, a New York broker, and General Custer were intimate friends, and Osborn annually visited the general at his camp on the plains. During one of the Indian campaigns he invited Osborn and a party of friends to Kansas and after giving them a buffalo hunt arranged a novel experience in the way of an Indian scare. As Osborn was lying in his tent one night firing was heard at the outposts and the rapid riding of pickets. "Boots and saddles!" was the order in the disturbed atmosphere of the night, and Custer appeared to Osborn loaded with rifle, two revolvers, a saber and a scalping knife.

"Charles," he said in his quick, nervous way, "you must defend yourself. Sitting Bull and Flea in Your Boots, with Wiggle Tail Jim and Scalp Lock Skowheban, are on us in force. I did not want to alarm you before, but the safety of my command is my first duty. Things look serious. If we don't meet again, God bless you!"

The broker fell on his knees. "Custer," he cried, "only get me out of this! I'll carry a million shares of Western Union for you and let you into the firm to get me home! Only save me!"

But Custer was gone, and the camp by shrewd arrangement burst into a blaze, and shots, oaths and warwhoops were intermixed until suddenly a painted object loomed on Osborn's sight and something was flung into his face — a human scalp. He dropped to the ground and said the Lord's Prayer backward and sideways until the noise died away and there was exposed a lighted supper table with this explanation on a transparency: "Osborn's Treat!"

WANTED THEIR GOATS.

A Curious Adventure Among the Natives of Africa.

Mrs. Constance Larymore, author of "A Resident's Wife in Nigeria," recounts this curious adventure in Africa: "The sahib, as from ineradicable Indian habit I still commonly call my husband, had gone out at sunset after deer, and during his absence the entire population of the village came streaming up the hill to the rest house, all talking loudly and at once and evidently under the influence of strong excitement. I was by that time well accustomed to creating a sensation whenever I appeared, no white woman having been seen previously, but these people struck me as having more than usual in their minds and on their clanging tongues. I had been six weeks in the country. My knowledge of Hausa was confined to salutations and a few simple words, so I summoned our interpreter to help me to ascertain my visitors.

"They chattered, shouted and gesticulated at Paul, who eventually explained to me smilingly that they had never seen a white woman before and were anxious to offer me a personal welcome. I nodded and smiled in high gratification, thanked them cordially and when I had exhausted my small stock of polite salutations told the interpreter to give them leave to go home. This they did, somewhat reluctantly, I thought, but after describing the interview with some amusement to the sahib I dismissed the matter from my mind.

"Six weeks later we passed through Lokoja again on our way back to Lokoja and found it deserted—not a man, woman or child, not a goat, not a fowl—all gone, obviously fled into the bush. I felt distinctly hurt at this churlish behavior on the part of my late admir-

CULTURE OF HAIR

CULTURE OF HAIR

THE EVANS VACUUM CAP is a practical invention constructed on scientific and hygienic principles by the simple means of which a free and normal circulation is restored throughout the scalp. The minute blood vessels are gently stimulated to activity, thus allowing the food supply which can only be derived from the blood, to be carried to the hair roots, the effects of which are quickly seen in a healthy, vigorous growth of hair. There is no rubbing, and as no drugs or chemicals of whatsoever kind are employed there is nothing to cause irritation. It is only necessary to wear the Cap three or four minutes daily.

60 DAYS' FREE TRIAL!

The Company's Guarantee.

An EVANS VACUUM CAP will be sent you for sixty days' free trial. If you do not see a gradual development of a new growth of hair, and are not convinced that the Cap will completely restore your hair, you are at liberty to return the Cap with no expense whatever to yourself. It is requested, as an evidence of good faith, that the price of the Cap be deposited with the Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company of London, the largest financial and business institution of the kind in the world, who will issue a receipt guaranteeing that the money will be returned in full, on demand without questions or comment, at any time during the trial period.

The eminent Dr. I. N. LOVE, in his address to the Medical Board on the subject of Alopecia (loss of hair) stated that if a means could be devised to bring nutrition to the hair follicles (hair roots), without restoring to any irritating process, the problem of hair growth would be solved. Later on, when the EVANS VACUUM CAP was submitted to him for inspection, he remarked that the Cap would fulfil and confirm in practice the observations he had previously made before the Medical Board.

Dr. W. MOORE, referring to the invention, says that the principle upon which the Evans Vacuum Cap is founded is absolutely correct and indisputable.

An illustrated and descriptive book of the Evans Vacuum Cap will be sent, post free, on application.

THE SECRETARY, EVANS VACUUM CAP CO., LIMITED.

Regent House, Regent Street, London, W.

"Six weeks later we passed through Lokpa again on our way back to Lokola and found it deserted—not a man, woman or child, not a goat, not a fowl—all gone, obviously fled into the bush. I felt distinctly hurt at this churlish behavior on the part of my late admirers and learned long afterward that on our first visit our precious interpreter and others of our party had seized and killed every goat and fowl in the village. The wretched owners had rushed up to the rest house to complain, and all they got was 'Thank you!'"

"I am not ashamed to confess that I cried when I made that discovery. The lesson, however, went home to us both and drove us to work ceaselessly at the Hausa language, knowing there could be no security for ourselves or justice for the people until we could be independent of dishonest interpretation."

Many Women Have Discovered That a Course of Treatment With Pe-ru-na Cleanses the System of the Accumulations of Winter.

MRS. ALICE BRADLEY.

Mrs. Alice Bradley, Thorold, Ont., Can., writes:

"Two years ago I became weak and rundown and as time passed I gradually failed until a year ago, when I experienced a stroke of paralysis, which affected one side and I was helpless.

"I called in professional medical treatment, but steadily grew worse.

"I had decided I never would rise again from my bed, but, when Peruna was brought to me and after having taken four bottles of it, I was able to be out and a wonder to myself and friends.

"I consider Peruna a great blessing to the afflicted. I may add that my daughter has also used Peruna and has been blessed with renewed health. I believe Peruna saved our lives."

Mrs. Daniel Passmore, Welland, Ontario, Can., writes:
"For three years I was severely afflicted with stomach trouble, and for days at a time I could not eat anything. I grew thin in flesh, had headaches and was the picture of despair.

"I was attended by three doctors, but got no good results.

"Finally I began the use of Peruna. I soon noticed an improvement and after using three bottles, I was able to relish a meal, in fact, could eat anything.

"To-day I feel well and strong. I consider that Peruna has saved my life and I shall always praise it."

MRS. DANIEL PASSMORE.

Mrs. N. P. Lawler, 423 1/2 N. Broadway, Pittsburgh, Kas., writes:

"Last spring I caught a severe cold which developed into a serious case of catarrh. I felt weak and sick and could neither eat nor sleep well.

"A member of our club, who had been cured of catarrh through the use of Peruna, advised me to try it and I did so at once.

"I expected help, but nothing like the wonderful change for the better I observed almost as soon as I started taking it.

"In three days I felt much better, and within a week I was well.

"I continued taking the entire bottle and within two weeks I was in fine health."

"Peruna is a wonderful medicine."

Mr. Lee King, R. F. D. No. 4, Farmersville, Tex., writes.

"My health has been better generally this spring and summer than it has been for four years and I have worked nearly every day.

"I suffered with dysentery and bowel trouble.

"Your remedy also cured my wife of constipation.

"I wish you continued success with your great medicine, Peruna."

My friend, a British merchant, on his first visit to Russia, was being introduced to a local banking house. As the cashier momentarily laid aside his cigarette in a convenient ash tray to attend to us my visitor looked amazedly around the spacious room, where here and there among the staff of sixty clerks he saw the curling blue smoke of many cigarettes. The cashier proffered his cigarette case.

"Well, do you know," said my friend, "it is not by any means our notion of business, and yet somehow it looks homely and agreeable, and none of these fellows appears to be lazy or shirking."

Then came a further surprise for my companion. A neatly dressed waitress emerging from some lower region was passing behind the chief counter bearing a large tray on which were some ten or twelve glasses of tea, with the usual small dish of sliced lemon and silver fork. The tea was first distributed to the senior clerks in the various departments, and the waitress returned for further supplies for the rest of the staff.

"Also a Russian institution?" smilingly queried the London merchant.

"Exactly," I replied, "and the tea is of the finest quality."

From the bank we drove to the postoffice and telegraph station. In these places it is forbidden to the public to smoke, but behind the counters in every department the cigarette and tea were just as much in evidence as they were at the bank. The tea is always supplied by the establishment, whatever it may be. The cigarettes the officials and clerks find themselves.

It may be that you will suggest that the usual carte would be a greater compliment to your common sense, but if you do that you are a brave man. The cowards may console themselves with the reflection that in the eyes of the management they are either princes, rich Americans or fools. I have seen half a hundred princes, a few rich Americans and a great many fools, for unless one is born to the people the maitre d'hotel of such a place as the Cafe de Paris is apt to tower above one, a greater man than Saul of Tarsus. I recall the incident of an American who did object, not to the carte, but to the bill as rendered, and what do you think happened to him?

"If monsieur pleases," suavely said the maitre d'hotel, "it will afford us the greatest pleasure to extend to monsieur the hospitality of the house, in which case monsieur will of course pay nothing, but unless monsieur wishes to accept we must ask him to pay the full amount of the bill as rendered. We cannot permit that our tariff should be questioned."

The virtues of a keen business man are often negative rather than positive. It is said that a great broker once told his son that only two things were necessary to make a great financier.
"And what are those, papa?" the son asked.
"Honesty and sagacity."
"But what do you consider the mark of honesty to be?"
"Always to keep your word."

"Never to give your word."

Bobby and Fenny's Picnic Dinner

A STORY FOR THE WEE ONES, BY MAUD WALKER.

Bobby was seven years old. He had curls and freckles and a sore big toe. Fenny was Bobby's sister, aged five. She had curls and freckles, but no sore big toe. Now, the sore big toe was what kept Bobby home from school one day; it hurt him to wear his good shoes. He didn't mind wearing his old shoes—those with the holes in the toes. Oh, no, indeed; he liked wearing those old shoes, for then his sore big toe could take a peep out of doors—or I should say out of shoe—every little while. And as Fenny was still too young to go to school (they lived in the country, where there were no kindergartens) she did not need a sore big toe to keep her at home. The fact is, Fenny would have loved to go to school; although her brother Bobby wished very much to stay at home every chance he got.

"I'll tell you what let's do," said Bobby on the morning of our story. "Let's have a picnic down behind the chicken-coop. Mamma won't care if we go there, for that won't hurt my sore big toe."

"Oh, goodness! Won't 'at bejes' fine?" cried Fenny. And she clapped her hands in glee. "I love a picnic, I do, bruv'er." (Fenny remembered a picnic that her mamma had taken her to almost a year ago.)

"What'll we have for our picnic dinner?" asked Bobby. "Mamma's gone to town an' Nancy, she's so cross to us that I'm afraid to ask her for take an' bread an' jam."

"I'll ask her," suggested Fenny, running off to the kitchen. When she entered she found the old servant very busy baking cookies. "Oh, Nancy, will you please dive bruv'er and me some cookies for our picnic dinner? We're goin' to have a picnic down behind the chicken coop." Thus spoke Fenny, addressing the sour-faced old Nancy, who never liked to have children come about her domain.

"Nopce, you can't dip into my bakery," Nancy snapped. "It's bad enough that yer mommer told me to cut out a lot of cookies in the shapes of animals for you and Bob. I can't take time to bake a lot of extra ones for you to eat between meals. If you wait till teatime you'll have a lot of elephants, cats, dogs, and the goodness only knows what else, to eat. Yer mommer got a lot of them little animal-cutters last time she went into town, an' today's bakin' day, so I'm goin' to try makin' animal cookies for you'n Bob. But you mustn't come pesterin' about the kitchen. I can't be bothered. Run along an' play corn cobs an' chips are your cake and chicken for your picnic dinner. That's the sort of play picnic dinners I used to have when I was a little youngster."

Fenny, her lips pouting with disappointment, went back to her brother, saying, "Ole Nancy, she won't dive us any goodies for our picnic. She says for us to play 'at corncobs an' chips are cake and chicken, an' that she won't be pestered by us in the kitchen."

"She's awful cross," declared Bobby. "I wish mamma would hurry home. Then we'd have a fine spread for our picnic, we would. Any time 'at we want a picnic dinner mamma would give it to us, an' specially when I've got a sore big toe."

"Dat's tause our mamma's so sweet an' dood," declared Fenny, the pout leaving her face as she recalled her dear mamma to mind. "But, tome long, bruv'er, let's go an' have our picnic anyway. We can play 'at corncobs an' chips are goodies, though it be lots nicer to have real goodies to eat sure 'nough."

Bobby, limping with his sore big toe, and Fenny, running and bounding ahead of him, went off to a shady spot behind the jolly big chicken coop. It was so lively there with the old red rooster and the old black rooster crowing and strutting about in the glorious sunshine. And there were mother hens with their little broods of downy chicks going cluck-a-cluck, cluck-a-cluck. And there was a great cornfield stretching away over the long hillside, running up and up behind the chicken coop. Fenny and Bobby thought it would be fun to play the field was a forest and the little stalks of corn great trees. In the country where Bobby and Fenny lived there were very few forests, and the trees that grew on their farm had been planted there. As these stood about the front yard and down the lane leading to the big road, Bobby and Fenny rarely ever played beneath them. They preferred the shade of the stables, the chicken coop or a hay stack.

And while they played behind the chicken coop, pretending that the field was a forest, that the roosters were lions and the hens and chickens were panthers and wolves, old Nancy was baking animal cakes in the kitchen. She had a whole pan of elephants, dogs and mules done to a fine brittle brown, and had turned them into a big platter to cool. The platter was set on the window ledge where the cool atmosphere would drive away the heat of the oven. "As soon as they're cool I'll put 'em away in the pantry, fer if them youngsters sees 'em they'll begin to beg for 'em. But while they're coolin' off an' while my bread is risin' I'll just steal a little nap before dinner time an' while the mistress is away."

No sooner had Nancy sought the pillow of her own bed in a room leading from the kitchen than a strange thing happened. On the platter in the window the animals came to life—or that is, they began to move about. "I say, friends," said one little fat dog, whose nose had gotten scorched. "I don't like this humdrum place a little bit. Suppose we go out and stir up some excitement."

"Ah, wisely said," declared an old elephant, whose trunk had baked so hard that it could not bend. "A great idea. Suppose we go into the world and see what it's like."

"I'm with you, friends animals," said a brisk mule with a pair of very long ears. "I'm ready to run and kick up my heels this very minute if others of my friends will join me."

"Ah! that sounds jolly!" cried a young colt, as frisky as you please. "Come, let's be moving before that sour old woman returns to the kitchen."

Then away they all went, jumping from the window and going off toward the chicken coop, just as if they knew two little ones were there longing for a picnic dinner. At the moment when they arrived Fenny and Bobby had gone into the edge of the make-believe forest to hunt for fairies, so the elephants, the dogs, the mules and colts all frisked about, jumping right on Fenny's white apron, which she had spread upon the ground for a make-believe luncheon cloth. And hardly had they become located upon the cloth when back to the spot came Bobby and Fenny. Now, the funniest part of this funny happening was that the very minute the cookie animals got upon that white cloth they became mere sweet cakes again, and lost all power of action or speech. And as they never did have feeling, they were mere cookies once more, just like they had been half an hour ago, when first coming from a very hot oven.

"Oh! see the cookies!" And Fenny ran with all possible speed to the spot where her apron lay covered with elephants, dogs, mules and colts. "Oh! old Nancy brought them to us. Isn't she dood?"

"Well, if she didn't bring us a spread!" exclaimed Bobby, limping up to the picnic cloth. "Well, Nancy ain't so cross after all. But say, I'm as hungry as a wolf from the forest behind us. Suppose we fall to."

"Ugh! but dis elephant is dood!" exclaimed Fenny, eating off the trunk of the largest elephant. "An' dat 'little tolt wif the long main—ugh! I'm doin' to eat him next."

Bobby was too busy with eating dogs, elephants, colts, mules, all mixed up together, to say anything more for 10 minutes. In the meantime a pair of eyes were watching the little picnickers from

Oh, see the cookies! Old Nancy brought them to us, isn't she dood?"

When Naughty Chub Went A Fishing

Chub was a little boy. His real name was not Chub, but because of his being such a roly-poly little chap the name seemed to suit him better than did the name he had been christened by, which was Charles Andrew. Now his mamma and papa both thought that Charles Andrew was entirely too heavy for their son till he should grow to be a big boy so he was called Chubby when a tot and Chub when he got to be six years old.

Well, as soon as the fine weather of early summer had set in Chub began begging his mamma to allow him to go to the river, half a mile away from his home, to fish. He had never gone fishing alone, for during the previous year he had been too young to go to the river unaccompanied by his father or mother. And he had never fished, either, except in the bathtub, or in the pretty pond in the back yard where the water lilies grew. And, of Fatty Smart went all by themselves yesterday, and Fatty said they pretty nearly caught a big fish—oh, as big as—as as an elephant."

"No, no, no, Chub," said mamma pouncing up her lips and drawing her little son on her knee. "No, dear boy, fishes as large as elephants do not exist in rivers. Whales are the largest fish known, and they stay away out in the ocean. So, if Tommy and Fatty thought there was any chance of catching such large fish as they have doubtless described to you they have been misinformed about the size of river fish. And it is very wrong of them to use such exaggerated forms of speech. Exaggeration is one kind of falsehood, you know, dear."

"Well, maybe they saw a fish what looked as big to them as an elephant," insisted Chub. "Fatty said he saw one swimming right under the water where Chub watched his mother depart; then he wandered about the yard for a little while. But the confines of the fenced domain held little attraction for him, and he went to the gate and watched the passers-by.

But pretty soon he found his eyes straying toward the line of timber that bordered the river half a mile away. "I wonder how big the fishes in the river are?" he questioned himself. I bet I could catch one if—if only I could get there alone. I wonder why mamma won't allow me to go fishing alone? I'm most as big as Fatty, an' he goes with jest Tommy. And Tommy isn't much bigger'n me."

Then Chub strolled down the side of the fence, going in the direction of the river. "Wish that old fence wasn't here," he murmured. "Oh, there's a lot of boards off it down by the alley." Then he ran with all his might to the place where several of the fence boards had been torn away by some men who were digging a place for a new sewer pipe. The men had quit work for the noon hour, and Chub examined their work easy to stroll down the alley in the direction of the river. Of course, Chub had no notion of going far from home. He just thought to walk along the alley behind the neighbors' houses and look for stray cats. No cats coming to notice, he went on and on, soon emerging into the street about two blocks away from his own house.

There he stood for a minute, wondering whether he should turn back or continue his walk. Again his eyes sought the line of timber that marked the river bank, and he said again to himself: "I wonder how big the fishes in the river are?" Then, thinking that it would be a long time before his mother should return, he decided to walk toward the river for a little piece and to return before his mamma should do so.

And so it happened that Chub did the very thing he should not have done; he disobeyed his dear mamma. And once his mind was made up to go toward the river he went off at full speed, making the alley dust fly from his little fat feet. He hadn't a hat nor jacket, but the day was so warm that he didn't need too young to go to the river unaccompanied by his father or mother. And he had never fished, either, except in the bathtub, or in the pretty pond in the backyard where the water lilies grew. And, of you know, dear. "Well, maybe they saw a fish what looked as big to them as an elephant," insisted Chub. "Fatty said he saw one swimming right under the water where here," he murmured. "Oh, there's a lot of boards off it down by the alley." Then he ran with all his might to the place where several of the fence boards had been torn away by some men who were digging a place for a new sewer pipe. The men had quit work for the noon hour, and Chub examined their work tools. But these held little interest for him, and soon he found himself outside the fence that confined the yard of his own home and yet he had not gone through the gate nor over the fence. He had walked right out at the place where the workmen had been digging. And it was really very difficult to know just where his own fence ought to be, for the dirt had been tossed every way, and the line where the fence had been was completely obliterated. So Chub eased his little conscience by thinking he had not really disobeyed his mamma's instructions after all, for he had not gone outside the fence—there being no fence at that particular spot. Once outside the fence it was very his mamma should go so. And so it happened that Chub did the very thing he should not have done; he disobeyed his dear mamma. And once his mind was made up to go toward the river he went off at full speed, making the alley dust fly from his little fat feet. He hadn't a hat nor jacket, but the day was so warm that he didn't need them. So on he flew toward the river, his little face beaming from the sun's rays and dripping with perspiration. The line of trees looked vel close indeed when viewed from the yard of his own home; but in covering the ground, step by step, the distance became great, and before Chub had reached the first few straggling bushes that led to the greater trees on the river bank he was quite exhausted. He really had not meant to go all the way to the river, but after starting his curiosity had become so great that he could not turn back. "I may get a peep at a fish as big as the one Fatty saw swimming in the water," he said by way of encouraging himself.

Looking intently into the water course, he had never caught any fish in either of those places.

So, with the first summer days Chub began begging and coaxing his mamma to allow him to go fishing in the big river at the outskirts of town.

"Why, Chub, I couldn't think of allowing you to go to the river alone," explained his mamma. "You might fall into the water or get snake bitten. Oh, there are so many dangers to beset a little man like my Chub when he has neither mother nor father with him."

"But I want to go," wailed Chub, tears gleaming in his eyes. "Tommy Peters and he stood, and it he'd had a fish line and hook he'd 'a caught it."

"Well, well, we'll learn more about fish some day soon," promised Chub's mamma. "And for the present you may run and play in the yard. But don't get on mamma's flower beds; and don't stray outside the fence. I must go down town on an errand, and after I return—if you've been good boy and obeyed mamma—we'll have a little outing. Sam will hitch old Rodger to the phaeton and Chub may handle the lines. Won't that be jolly? Now, kiss mamma, and play merrily till she comes hurrying home again in about an hour."

THE MOST DANGEROUS DEBT

We Are All Debtors, One to Another, and None Can Live to Himself.

"Owe no man anything, but to love one another."—St. Paul's Rom. 13: 8.

Many a man who prides himself on paying his way and on living out of debt would be in absolute bankruptcy if he ceased to square his accounts with life. He may have paid for all the goods he has bought, but he has failed to make any adequate return for the good that has come freely to him.

Life is much the business of paying to the present those debts which we owe to the past, of putting into the universe and back into our humanity at least a part of that which we have drawn for our own enriching from these resources. Love is life's great law, because love is the principle of self-giving in action.

We are all debtors one to another. No man can avoid the indebtedness for the sacrifices which men have made before him, which alone make possible his present advantages. You may boast that you owe no man anything, but what of your father's toil for you, your mother's devotion?

Our creditors stretch far back, a long line beyond our ken. Some man long ago conceived a great principle, the education and defense of which cost him his comfort, strength, and, at length his life. At that cost he purchased our right to live in the freedom of that principle.

WE CALL HIM A HERO;

but we do not discharge our debts to him by the erection of monuments or the writing of poems in his honor.

He who talks of himself as self-made thereby gives evidence of the incompleteness of the process of his making, his powers of self-understanding are undeveloped. A thousand lives go into the making of the least life. None can live to himself nor by his own resources. It is good to cultivate the spirit of independence, but the fact of indebtedness none can escape.

What self-respecting man would be content to eat at another's table, to be clothed at another's expense, and make no sort of recompense? Yet in what manner does such a course differ from ours if we live day by day with no other thought than to get more and yet more out of life for ourselves. Humanity is our host. Even the bread we eat and the clothes we wear we never could gain for ourselves unaided; the efforts of all mankind have been necessary to their production.

Even for our food, our clothes, not to mention other and greater benefits, we never can pay with money. We may earn the loaf, but who shall pay the sower of long ago, the miller, the mechanic, the thinker, the pioneer who gave their lives to make our wheat fields and turn them into bread?

Sheer business honesty with life will force us to ask, How can I pay these debtors? What return can I make for all that I have received?

THE ANSWER IS SIMPLE.

that we should do for humanity what humanity is doing for us, that since we are recipients we should be givers, that we should be led by that law of love that already has wrought for our blessing.

If to lives of long ago we owe faith and freedom what good things are our lives passing on to those who follow us? If through the service of our fellows we are enriched to-day to what extent are they enriched through our service? We have received; have we given?

There is no gain to the life that is all getting. It loses itself. Such a life is a parasite, an abnormality and deformity in a world where giving is the law of living. No other life is quite so empty as that which thinks only of filling its life and never of enriching others.

One can lay aside all sentiment here and see a plain business proposition. We are debtors to our fellows, we owe those of the past and those of the present; what are we but defaulters if, knowing these things, we continue evading the payment of our debts, continue with greed seeking only to get and never to give?

Such a course is the saddest kind of suicide. Yielding to self-love the man ignores the claims of his fellows or hides them under sophistry and, giving himself to gains is surprised to find life so barren, so disappointing. Defying life's law of love he has lost the power of loving, the sensibility of love, the prize of life itself, the power of living.

WILLING TO BE CONVINCED.

A sturdy tramp one day went into a garden, where the lady of the house was engaged in attending to the flowers. He took no notice of her refusal to give coppers, but continued his importunity until a bull-dog appeared, growling ominously. The lady seized it by the collar and held it, calling out:

"You had better go away at once; he may bite you."

"You ain't got no right to keep a savage dog like that," replied the tramp in outraged tones.

"Perhaps I have not," was the cool answer. "If you think so, I won't keep him—I'll let him go."

The latch of the gate clicked violently and in twenty seconds that tramp had vanished into space.

GATHERING INDIA RUBBER.

Interesting Facts in Regard to the Industry in the Amazon Region.

India-rubber has a curious history in the arts. Its common name was given to it because it was first used for removing pencil marks from paper. It is produced in most tropical lands. The use of it has increased until it has become one of the most important forest products of the world. It has become in many parts of the world an article of cultivation, but the native forests of the Amazon basin and of the Congo, in Africa, are still the source of the world's greatest supply. The quantity has been greatly increased in later years, for the production has been stimulated by an advance in price. Interesting facts in regard to the industry in the Amazon region are given by one who is a native of the country and familiar with its productions.

As the steamer moves along, the traveler on the Amazon, or on any of its numerous navigable tributaries, will notice little wisps of smoke rising from the banks of the river. The smoke, which is quite characteristic of the most fertile river-banks, indicates the places where the natives are treating the sap of the rubber-tree to prepare it for the market.

The business of collecting and preparing rubber is carried on extensively in the valley of the Amazon. There are districts of from forty to fifty square miles owned and operated by one person. The rubber-trees are scattered more or less plentifully among other trees that yield no profit as yet.

When a man has secured a large tract of forest land for the industry, he puts up a rough shelter upon it, and engages all the Indians of the neighborhood, men and women, to help him in the work.

They start out early in the morning to make the rounds of the estate, for they must get back to the riverside before the heat of the day becomes too great. They tap the trees afresh if they need it, attach the little tin cups for catching the sap, and bring home whatever sap may have been collected.

The sap of the rubber-tree is a perfectly white liquid of the consistency of goat's milk. It is necessary that it be converted into a solid. This is effected by the action of a pungent smoke which coagulates, or curdles, the milky fluid. For this use the seeds of two different kinds of palm are employed. Nothing else will answer the purpose.

The seeds are put in an earthen jar which has a narrow neck, the bottom of which is perforated with a number of square holes. In this the palm nuts are burned; the holes in the bottom of the jar admit a draft and cause a dense smoke to issue from the neck. This is the smoke seen from the deck of the steamer.

The operator takes a paddle similar to that with which he paddles his canoe and holds the blade of it over the jar. Upon it he pours the milky juice, cup by cup, all the time turning the blade so as to bring all parts of it into the behind the chicken coop. They belonged to old Nancy. Upon missing the animal cookies from the platter she had started in quest of them, thinking that Bobby and Penny had slyly taken them away during her 40 winks. But just as she neared the shady spot behind the chicken coop she was surprised to observe the little dough animals cowering about, jumping from the apron which lay spread as if ready to receive them. And then, while still dumb with surprise she saw Penny come toward the spot and saw that the little girl's surprise was almost as great as her own. Then followed Bobby's appearance, and from the manner of both children Nancy knew that they had had no hand in the strange conduct of the animals.

"I reckon I'm bewitched," Nancy whispered to herself. "Anyway, them youngsters are as innocent as lambs. Let 'em eat the elephants, the dogs—the whole food dough menagerie, for I'll go in an' bake a lot more of 'em. But of all the tricks I ever saw in my life this one beats 'em. Dough animals—baked good and hard—getting up and running off to serve as a picnic dinner! Pahaw! it's too silly to talk about. I reckon the whole thing's a dream. But I'd better go into the kitchen or my bread will take legs and run away the next thing."

And that's the story of the picnic dinner that came to Bobby and Penny on the edge of the great forest where terrible animals and fairies abounded. And it may be just a dream, and it may be that it really happened; but we have no way of finding out about it, for it happened so very, very long ago, and Bobby and Penny are grown up now and have forgotten about it while Nancy, now a very old woman, will not talk of the time when "dough animals came to sure-enough life."

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, JUNE 14.

Lesson XI. The Risen Christ by the Sea of Galilee. Golden Text, Matt. 28. 30.

THE LESSON WORD STUDIES.

(Based on the text of the Revised Version.

An Appended Chapter.—The narrative of John's Gospel was formally brought to a close with verses 30 and 31 of chapter 20. Chapter 21, therefore, forms an epilogue, or appendix, to the Gospel, which to a certain extent balances the prologue to the Gospel (John 1. 1-18). This epilogue, however, unlike the prologue, does not seem to have been part of the original plan of the Gospel. It seems evident that when verse 30 of the preceding chapter was written the author had no intention of narrating any more "signs," having already brought his testimony to the divinity of Jesus to the culminating point in the record of the resurrection. The reason for adding another section or paragraph seems to have been the desire on the apostle's part to give a full and accurate account of Christ's words concerning himself, about which there had evidently been serious misunderstanding. In order, therefore, to make the meaning of Christ's remark as clear as possible John here gives in detail the circumstances which led to its being uttered. The epilogue is found in every extant manuscript of the Gospel, and falls naturally into four parts: (1) The manifestation of Jesus to the seven, and the miraculous draught of fishes (1-14); (2) Christ's commission to Peter and the prediction as to the latter's death (15-19); (3) The misunderstood saying respecting the apostle John (20-23); (4) Appended testimony to the authenticity of the Gospel (24, 25).

Verse 1. After these things—A vague indication of time, such as occurs repeatedly in the Gospel. The events referred to are the appearances of Jesus recorded in the preceding chapter.

Again—Having already appeared to the disciples on two separate occasions mentioned by the author.

Thomas—The Roman name for the Sea of Galilee, occurring only in this Gospel, but probably better known to persons outside of Palestine than the name with which we are most familiar from the synoptic records.

2. There were together—Probably all seven of the disciples referred to resided in the neighborhood.

Called Didymus—Lit., "twin."

The sons of Zebedee—James and John. Two other of his disciples—Very probably Andrew and Philip, though since their names are not given, possibly two other disciples who were not members of the apostolic group.

3. Simon Peter saith—Simon is still the leader and spokesman.

I go a fishing—Fishing had been the occupation of several of the apostles before they had been called by Jesus. Since the departure of Jesus from them they seem to have been still uncertain as to their future. Hence it was natural for them to return temporarily to their former occupation.

They took nothing—Even though the best time for fishing was after sunset and before sunrise. Compare the similar incident recorded in Luke 5. 1-10.

5. Children—An expression equivalent to "boys" or "lads" in the sense in which either of these terms might be applied by masters to their workmen, or by men to each other.

Have ye ought to eat?—Or, "Have ye any fish?"

6. On the right side of the boat—They had apparently been fishing on the opposite or left side, and may have thought that the Stranger's advice was based upon his having observed a disturbance of the water's surface indicating the presence of fish which had escaped their notice.

WORSE THAN EVER

In driving across Long Island in a horse and buggy, I met with an accident almost in front of a farmhouse, and presently a young man of 24 came out to help me adjust things. When repairs had been made and I was ready to go on I asked:

"Well, have you got over the panic out here in the country yet?"

"I can't say that we have," was the reply.

"But money is not as tight as it was."

"N-o, perhaps not."

"Then you mean that confidence is not completely restored yet?"

"Yes, sir, that is what I mean. I mean that so far from being restored it is worse than ever."

"I hardly see how that can be. In town things are going on about the same as before the scare. In what does the farming community show lack of confidence?"

"Well, last October," he said, as a sheepish look came over his face, "I asked a widow two miles down the road to have me. She said she would. Then the panic came."

"I see, and you thought it best to defer the marriage?"

"Yes, sir."

"And after a time the widow seemed to lose confidence in you?"

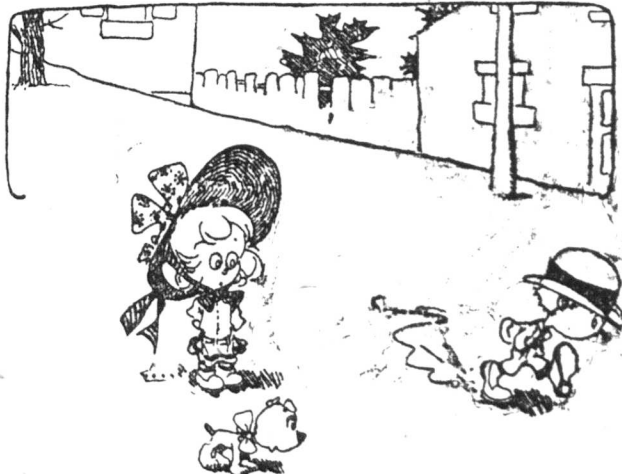

"She did."

"But hasn't she gradually regained it?"

"No sir. She seems to have gradually lost more and more, and the constable was here and handed me this this morning."

And he drew from his pocket and handed me for inspection a legal summons in a case of breach-of-promise suit. "I wanted to say something to show that I sympathized with him, but after trying in vain I got into the buggy and drove away and left him standing in the middle of the road."

Once on the bank of the river he wandered along and along, looking intently into the water, hoping to see the great fish that had figured in Patty's "fai story." And in this way he forgot to take notice of the place where he had started from—the point where he had approached the river. After walking for sometime he became very tired and sat down to rest a minute. And, as I have said, the day was very warm. Within a very short time Chub's eyes had gone shut and Chub's head had dropped upon the soft, green grass behind him. Then Chub slept and dreamed of fishing. After a little a bird's shrill note caused him to wake, and recalling where he was he started up quickly, determined to run home with all possible speed. He had entered a deep bend in the river, and was now confused as to which direction he had come from. As a matter of fact, he started homeward the wrong way, taking the direction which led him further and further away from the desired destination.

was now confessed as to which direction he had come from. As a matter of fact, he started homeward the wrong way, taking the direction which led him further and further away from the desired destination.

And so the time went on and Chub's feet were weary and sore. He climbed the bank several times to look for the town, but somehow the church spires and all houses had disappeared from the face of the earth. Chub's heart sank with fear. Was he lost? The truth of the matter was that in walking in the wrong direction he had followed a curve in the river which led him away from the town and threw a long hill between that place and his present location.

Then poor little Chub realized his dear mamma's wisdom in refusing to allow him to go to the river alone. He sat down and wept tears of real anguish. Somehow, he felt that he would never see his dear home, his darling papa and mamma again. And there were old Rodger, the horse, little Sport, his pet doggie, and Tabby, the cat and Fiddler, the canary bird. Oh! None of these would he ever behold again. Oh, oh, how very naughty he had been to run away! And that great big fish that Fatty had bragged about! It was all a two-story fib, that was just what it was!

How long this might have lasted we cannot say but a dear voice at that moment cried out: "Chubby, dear!" And Chub looked up through his tears to see his own mother coming down the hill toward him. He forgot his disobedience in the moment of extreme happiness and ran to greet her.

"Oh, mamma, I've been lost," he cried, fresh tears streaming from his eyes.

"Yes, and hadn't it been for an old farmer whom I met on the road you might never have been found," said his mother. "I missed you from home and those workmen in the back yard said they had seen you going off toward the river about noon. So I followed the path this way. On reaching the road I didn't know which direction to turn to look for you. An old man happened to have seen you coming this way and put me on your track, otherwise you might have been lost over night. Now, you see what your disobedience has done for you? I had planned a little fishing picnic for you this afternoon and went to town for the fishing rod and line. And after everything had been arranged you spoiled it all by running away. No—not a word, my naughty child! You have disobeyed my orders, and you shall go straight home and get into bed without your dinner or supper. No, do not protest; you must be punished. Had you been a good boy and obeyed mamma your day would have been a glorious one."

And in his heart Chub vowed to never disobey his mamma again.

had apparently been fishing on the opposite, or left, side, and may have thought that the Stranger's advice was based upon his having observed a disturbance of the water's surface indicating the presence of fish which had escaped their notice.

7. That disciple therefore whom Jesus loveth—John—John was the first to discover the identity of the Stranger, while Peter was the first to act upon making the discovery. This circumstance well illustrates the difference in character between the two men, John being the more thoughtful and having apparently deeper intuitions, while Peter was the more impulsive and demonstrative in his attachment for his Master.

8. Two hundred cubits—About one hundred yards.

9. A fire of coals—Greek, "A fire of charcoal."

Fish—Lit., "A fish."

Bread—Or, "a loaf."

11. Up—Greek, "Aboard," that is, back into the boat.

Great fishes, a hundred and fifty and three—As a fisherman John never forgot the exact number, and the fact that the fishes had seemed to him at the time unusually large.

12. Break your fast—An expression the significance of which is preserved in our word "breakfast."

None of the disciples durst inquire of him—Their curiosity no doubt would have prompted many inquiries, but their reverence for their risen Lord compelled silence.

13. Cometh, and taketh the bread, and giveth them—They awe and reverence forbade their approach to him. Hence Jesus found it necessary to break the spell which his presence had thrown on the group by himself taking the initiative and advancing to where they stood.

15. Simon, son of John—The usual way of designating a person's complete identity among the Hebrews, equivalent to our writing out a name in full. The custom of adopting a family name was not common among the Hebrews until comparatively recent times.

16. Lovest thou me more than these?—Referring apparently to Peter's earlier boast (compare John 13: 37). The verb "love" used by Jesus in this and the next verse denotes esteem rather than affection; that is, "a state of feeling that is closely related to the judgment and the moral sense."

Thou knowest—Peter is not boastful now, but leaves it to the Master's infallible judgment to gauge his heart aright.

I love thee—The word "love" used by Peter throughout and by Jesus in his third question (verse 17), is not the same as the word used by Jesus in his first and second questions (verses 15, 16). Peter is emphasizing his deep and passionate affection for his Lord, and uses a term expressing this attachment. Un-

A DRAMATIC CLIMAX

Her great-great-grandmother had been an actress, and practised dramatic situations. The old lady had also practised waking home when the company busted. The histrionic talent had, therefore, come down to Clara De Vere in a legitimate way.

Graduation day was at hand, and she determined to take a dramatic advantage of the occasion. She studied and thought and planned, and at length she hit it. Paul Rosemore, the clerk in the music store at $10 per week, would be there and have a front seat, and at the critical moment he would spring upon the stage and—

Her essay was announced at last, and she appeared. She was a vision in white. Never had she looked more lovely. Never had she seemed to have more nerve. Not a halt or a tremor as she came forward and faced that large and enthusiastic audience. In a loud clear voice she began. In a voice without a sign of timidity in it, she read her essay almost to the last line, and then—and then she wavered, stumbled—lost her presence of mind and seemed about to faint.

The audience began to applaud to encourage her, but it was too late. She swayed, tottered about and threw her Paul his cue, and was about to sink to the floor when a man sprang upon the stage and clasped her in his strong arms and whispered in her ear to be brave. It was not her Paul. He was still sitting there like a bump on a log. It was a one-horse grocer named Hogg. He was 50 years old, and had red whiskers and a bald head.

With a shriek of despair, Miss Clara twisted herself out of his arms, called him an idiot, and fled behind the curtain. The dramatic situation had been knocked into a cocked hat, and never again—never more on this earth—would she speak to the young man who hadn't got his wits and his legs unstuck soon enough to play the hero to her heroine, and end the graduation exercises with red and green fire and women fainting away all over the hall.

fortunately the English language has but one verb to express the meaning of both of the Greek words used in this passage.

Feed my lambs—The occupation of fishermen is to give place to that of the shepherd.

16. Lovest thou me?—Jesus drops the words "more than these" which the humbled disciple had hesitated to answer, but retains his own word for love, the emphasis of the question still being on the kind of love he requires of his followers.

Tend my sheep—The lambs of the flock need nourishment principally; the sheep require careful guidance as well as food.

18. When thou was young—Perhaps Peter was already past the prime of life.

Another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not—The reference here seems to be to the preliminary preparations in the case of crucifixion. The Master here foretells the manner of death which shall come to Peter, as it had to himself. The time and manner of the apostle's martyrdom are not certain, though early tradition points to the time of the persecution under Emperor Nero. All the earliest references to the apostle's death agree that he was crucified. Origen, one of the early church fathers, says that at his own request Peter was crucified with his head downward, not feeling himself worthy to die in precisely the same manner in which his Master had died.

21. Lord, and what shall this man do?—Greek, "Lord, and this man what?" Having received an intimation as to his own manner of death, Peter yields to the impulse to inquire concerning the future of another prominent member of the apostolic group. John, to whom Peter referred, was possibly the nearest of the others to Peter and Jesus, having overheard their conversation.

22. If I will—A gentle rebuke implying the right of Jesus to determine the destiny of each individual disciple. That the words of Jesus were misunderstood by more than one present is explained by John in the next verse.

24. These things—The events recorded not only in the foregoing appended chapter but in the entire Gospel. The words of this and the following verse contain testimony to the genuineness of John's Gospel adduced by other hands, probably, as is usually supposed, by elders of the church at Ephesus, in which city the Gospel is supposed to have been written.

25. The world itself would not contain the books—A strong hyperbole of which the apostle himself would scarcely have been guilty, though it is quite in harmony with the customary style of Oriental writers.

smoke. The fluid is instantly fixed, and adheres to the wood or to the rubber already formed. This process goes on until a solid lump is formed that will weigh perhaps sixteen pounds.

When the lump has grown large enough for handling, a slit is cut in it, and the fluid is drawn out. A mass of rubber is left ready for exportation. It is the smoke used in coagulating the sap that gives crude rubber the dark appearance which is familiar.

The natives who collect the rubber have little use for the article at home. They have no pencils to erase, wear no rain-coats, have no mills to be supplied with belting, nor automobiles that require rubber tires. They do, however, make playthings for their children by peering the sap into clay molds of birds, animals and fishes, and then crushing the clay and removing it.

OR, THE GIRL IN BLUE

CHAPTER XII.—(Continued).

And so we gossiped on, crossing the Park and entering Kensington Gardens—those beautiful pleasure grounds that always seem so neglected by the majority of Londoners—while the sun sank and disappeared in its blood-red afterglow. She spoke of her life abroad, declaring that she loved London and was always pleased to return to its wild, turbulent life. She had spent some time in Paris, in Vienna, in Berlin, but neither was half as interesting, she declared, as London.

"But you are not a Londoner, are you?" I asked.

"No, not exactly," she responded, "although I've lived here such a long time that I've become almost a Cockney. Are you a Londoner?"

"No," I answered; "I'm a countryman, born and bred."

"I heard the Colonel remark that other night that you had been afflicted by blindness for some time. Is that so?"

I responded in the affirmative.

"Terrible!" she ejaculated, glancing at me with those wonderful dark eyes of hers that seemed to hold me in fascination and look me through and through. "We who possess our eyesight cannot imagine the great disadvantages under which the blind are placed. How fortunate that you are cured!"

"Yes," I explained. "The cure is little short of a miracle. The three great oculists in London all agreed that I was incurable, yet there one day came to me a man who said he could give me back my sight. I allowed him to experiment, and he was successful. From the day that I could see plainly he, curiously enough, disappeared."

"How strange! Did he never come and see you afterward?"

"No. He took no reward, but simply discontinued his visits. I do not even know his real name."

"How extraordinary!" she observed, greatly interested. "I really believe that there is often more romance and mystery in real life than in books. Such a circumstance appears absolutely bewildering."

"If to you, Miss Anson, then how much more to me! I, who had relinquished all hope of again looking upon the world and enjoying life, now find myself actually in possession of my vision and able to mix with my fellow-men. Place your self for a moment in my position, and try to imagine my constant thankfulness."

"You must feel that a new life is opened to you—that you have begun a fresh existence," she observed with a true touch of sympathy in her sweet voice. Then she added, as if by afterthought, "How many of us would be glad to commence life afresh!"

The tone in which she uttered that sentence seemed incongruous. A few moments before she had been all brightness and gaiety, but in those words there vibrated a distinctly gloomy note.

"Surely you do not desire to commence your life again?" I said.

She sighed slightly.

"All of us have our burden of regrets," she answered vaguely, raising her eyes for an instant to mine, and then lowering them.

The action of some faithless lover. How many hundreds of girls with wealth and beauty, perfectly happy in all else, are daily wearing out their lives because of the fickleness of the men to whom they have foolishly given their hearts! The tightly laced corsets of every eight girls in ten conceal a heart filled by the regrets of a love long past; the men smile airily through the wreaths of their tobacco-smoke, while the women, in those little fits of melancholy which they love to indulge in, sit and reflect in silence upon the might-have-beens. Is there, I wonder, a single one of us, man or woman, who does not remember our first love, the deep immensity of that pair of eyes, the kindly sympathy of that face, which in our immature years we thought our ideal, and thereupon bowed the knee in worship? If such there be, then they are more unclad in their nature, or poetry within their soul. Indeed, the regrets arising from a long-forgotten love oftentimes mingle pleasure with sadness and through one's whole life form cherished memories of those flushed days of a buoyant youth. To how many of those who read these lines will be recalled vivid recollections of a summer idyll of long ago; a day when, with the dainty and lovely object of their affections, they wandered beside the blue sea, or on the banks of the tranquil, willow-lined river, or perhaps hand-in-hand strided beneath the great old forest trees, where the sunlight glinted and touched the gnarled trunks with grey and gold! To each will come back the sweet recollection of a sunset hour now long, long ago, when they pressed the lips of the one they loved, and thought the rough world as new as that summer afterglow. The regret of those days always remains—often only a pleasant memory, but, alas! sometimes a lamentation bordering upon despair, until the end of our days.

"And may I not know something, however little, of the cause of this oppression upon you?" I asked of her, after we had walked some distance in silence. "You tell me that you desire to wipe out the past and commence afresh. The reason of this interests me," I added.

"I don't know why you should interest yourself in me," she murmured. "It is really unnecessary."

"No, no," I exclaimed hastily. "Although our acquaintance has been of but brief duration, I am bold enough to believe that you count me among your friends. Is it not so?"

"Certainly, or I would not have given your permission to walk with me here," she answered with a sweetness which showed her unostentatious delicacy of character.

"Then, as your friend, I beg of you to retrace whatever confidence in me you may think fit, and to be assured that I will never abuse it."

"Confidences are unnecessary between us," she responded. "I have to bear my grief alone."

"Your words sound strange, coming from one whom I had thought so merry and light-hearted," I said.

"Are you, then, ignorant of the faculty a woman has of concealing her sorrows behind an outward show of gaiety—that a woman always possesses two countenances, the face and the mask?"

"You are scarcely complimentary to your own sex," I answered with a smile. "Yet that is surely no reason why you should be thus wretched and down-hearted."

Her manner puzzled me, for since the

Another Modern Miracle Paralysis Permanently Cured

The Sufferer Paralyzed From Waist to Feet—Encased in Plaster of Paris for Nine Months—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cure After Four Doctors Had Failed—The Cure Vouched for by a Well known Clergyman.

Paralysis, no matter how slight, is a terrible affliction, but to be paralyzed from waist to the feet, to be a helpless cripple, totally dependent upon what others do for you, is a condition as wretched as man could possibly bear. Such was the state of Mr. Allan J. McDonald, of Rice Point, P.E.I. For over a year he was a helpless invalid. He was paralyzed from his waist to his feet and for nine months lay in bed encased in a plaster of paris cast. Four of the best doctors in Prince Edward Island were unable to help him and he seemed doomed to a life of misery and despair. But hope came to him when he read of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had done for other sufferers from paralysis. He procured a supply of the Pills and began taking them. Gradually they broke the chains of disease that bound him, and filled his whole body with new blood, life and vigor. Mr. McDonald says: "I am a farmer and in consequence have a great deal of hard work to do. One day while about my work I injured my back, but at the time I paid little attention to the injury and continued my work. As time went on, though, the pain became more severe and I soon found myself unable to lift anything no matter how light. It was not long before I had to stop work altogether and consult a doctor. He treated me but his treatment did not help me and I rapidly grew worse. I had to take to my bed, and in the hope that my spine might receive strength I was encased in plaster of paris cast. This did not help me and I could feel the paralysis slowly creeping over me till I was totally paralyzed from my waist to my feet. I lost all control over my bowels and bladder and my legs had no more feeling than if they were made of wood. Three other doctors strived to cure me, but their treatment also was a failure, and for over eleven months I lay in bed unable to move. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were then advised and I was shown testimonials of others who had been cured of paralysis through them. I bought a supply and in less than three months they made a remarkable change in me. I was able to get out of bed and crawl along the floor on my hands and knees. Gradually my limbs became stronger. Soon I could walk with the aid of a cane and inside of nine months after I had begun the use of the Pills I was totally cured, and once more able to do light work. Now I am as strong as ever I was and can do my work about the farm without the least trouble. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are without an equal, for, besides my own case, I know of two other cases of paralysis cured by them. Two young girls who had been cripples and whom I advised to try the Pills."

In corroboration of what Mr. McDonald says, the Rev. D. MacLaren of Charlottetown, P. E. I., writes: "I visited Mr. McDonald many times during his illness. He was attended by three or more doctors and put in plaster paris, and everything imaginable which might be of benefit was done for him without success. He had lost all power of his body from his waist down, and I think he was nearly a year under treatment before he began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was with him the day he first moved his big toe and from that time on he gradually improved and for the last few years he has been perfectly well. I can vouch for the cure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills effected in his case."

If you are sick and the treatment you are now taking does not help you, give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. They have cured thousands after doctors and other medical treatment had hopelessly failed. These Pills actually make new, rich, red blood, feed the starved nerves and bring health and strength to every part of the body. This is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such apparently hopeless cases as Mr. McDonald's, and it is why they have cured thousands and thousands of sick, discouraged people in every part of the world. any service of me you will know where to write;" and, as we stood beneath the street-lamp, I drew out a card and, with a pencil I took from my vest-pocket, scribbled my address.

In silence she watched, but just as I had finished she suddenly gripped my hand, uttering a loud cry of amazement. "What's that you have there?" she demanded. "Let me see it!"

Next instant—before, indeed, I could be aware of her intention—she had snatched the pencil from my grasp, and was examining it closely beneath the gaslight.

"Ah!" she gasped, glaring at me in alarm. "It is—yes, it is his!"

The small gold pencil which I had inadvertently used was the one I had taken from the pocket of the dead unknown on that fatful August night.

him from birth. The only hope of coming out even is dirt-cheap pasture, and there is very little such that could not be turned to far better account. The three-year-old feeder or stocker has no place in a well-ordered system of agriculture. Eighteen or twenty months should be the limit of age for marketing cattle for the domestic trade, while ample weights for exporters should be attained at twenty-four to thirty. It is a matter of more intelligent business perception, more liberal feeding, and better herds-men.

FARM NOTES.

Your success for this year depends on how you do spring work. See to it that everything is done just right.

Have a box at the barn to receive all the odd bolts, hinges, handles and such things. There surely will be many times when you will go and hunt in that box for something you need.

During the process of producing each crop the progressive farmer sees points at which he can make the labor a little lighter next year, the cost of production a little less, and the quality of the crop a little better.

The man with a stout heart, willing hands, the intelligence to direct, and the patience to overcome difficulties and the

"All of us have our burden of regrets," she answered vaguely, raising her eyes for an instant to mine, and then lowering them.

We appeared in those moments to grow confidential. The crimson and orange was fast fading from the sky. It was growing dark beneath the shadow of the great elms, and already the line of street-lamps out in Kensington Gore were twinkling through the foliage on our left. No one in the vicinity, and we were walking very slowly, for truth to tell, I desired to delay our parting until the very last moment. Of all the leafy spots in giant London, there is none so rural, so romantic, or so picturesque in summer as that portion of Kensington Gardens lying between Queen's Gate and the Broad Walk. Save for the dull roar of distant traffic, one might easily fancy one's self far in the country, a hundred miles from the sound of Bow Bells.

"But you are young, Miss Anson," I observed philosophically, after a brief pause. "And if I may be permitted to say so, you have scarcely begun to live your life. Yet you actually wish to commence afresh!"

"Yes," she responded briefly. "I do. Strange, is it not?"

"Is the past, then, so full of bitterness?" I asked. The Colonel's strange warning returning to me at the same moment.

"Its bitterness is combined with regrets," she answered huskily, in a few words.

"But you, young, bright, happy, and talented, who need to think of the tenets of everyday life, should surely have no regrets so deep, as to cause you this anxiety and despair," I said with a feeling of tenderness. "I am ten years older than you, therefore I may be permitted to speak like this, even though my words may sound presumptuous."

"Continue," she exclaimed. "I assure you that in my present position I appreciate any words of sympathy."

"You have my deepest sympathy, Miss Anson; of that I assure you," I declared, detecting in her words a desire to confide in me. "If at your age you already desire to recommence life, your past cannot have been a happy one."

"It has been far from happy," she answered in a strange, mechanical voice. "Sometimes I think that I am the unhappiest woman in all the world."

"No, no," I hastened to reassure her. "We all, when in trouble, imagine that our burden is greater than that of any of our fellows, and that while others escape, upon us alone fall the graver misfortunes."

"I know, I know," she said. "But a pleasant face and an air of carelessness oftentimes conceal the most sorrowful heart. It is so in my case."

"And your sorrow causes you regret, and makes you wish to end your present life and commence afresh," I said gravely. "To myself, ignorant of the circumstances, it would seem as though you repented of some act or other."

"What do you mean?" she gasped quickly, looking at me with a strange expression in her dark eyes. "I do not repent—I regret nothing!"

I saw that I had made a grave mistake. In my fond and short-sighted enthusiasm I had allowed myself to speak a little too confidentially, whereupon her natural dignity had instantly rebelled. At once I apologized, and in an instant she became appeased.

"I regret extremely that you should have such a weight of anxiety upon your heart," I said. "If I can do anything to assist you, rely upon me."

"You are extremely kind," she answered in a gloomy tone; "but there is nothing—absolutely nothing."

"I really cannot understand the reason why, with every happiness around you, you should find yourself thus plunged in this despair," I remarked, puzzled. "Your home life is, I presume, happy enough?"

"Perfectly. I am entirely my own mistress, save in those things which might break through the ordinary conventionalities of life. I must admit to you that I am rather unconventional sometimes."

I had wondered whether, like so many other girls, she had some imaginary grievance in her home; but now, finding that this was not so, it naturally occurred to me that the cause of her strange desire to live over again arose through

"Are you, then, ignorant of the faculty a woman has of concealing her sorrows behind an outward show of gaiety—that a woman always possesses two countenances, the face and the mask?"

"You are scarcely complimentary to your own sex," I answered with a smile. "Yet that is surely no reason why you should be thus wretched and down-hearted."

Her manner puzzled me, for since the commencement of our conversation she had grown strangely melancholy—entirely unlike her own bright self. I tried to obtain from her some clue to the cause of her sadness, but in vain. My short acquaintance with her did not warrant me pressing upon her a subject which was palpably distasteful; nevertheless, it seemed to me more than strange that she should thus acknowledge to me her sorrow at a moment when any other woman would have practised coquetry.

"I can only suffer in silence," she responded, when I asked her to tell me something of the cause of her unhappiness.

"Excuse my depression this evening, I know that to you I must seem a hypochondriac, but I will promise you to wear the mask—if ever we meet again."

"Why do you speak so vaguely?" I inquired in quick apprehension. "I certainly hope that we shall meet again, many, many times. Your words would make it appear as though such meeting is improbable."

"I think it is," she answered simply. "You are very kind to have borne with me, like this," she added, her manner quickly changing; "and if we do meet, I'll try not to have another fit of melancholy."

"Yes, Miss Anson," I said, halting in the path. "Let us meet again. Remember that we have to-day commenced a friendship—a friendship which I trust will last always."

But she slowly shook her head, as though the heavy sadness of her heart still possessed her.

"Friendship may exist between us, but frequent meetings are, I fear, impossible."

"Why? You told me only a moment ago that you were your own mistress," I observed.

"And so I am in most things," she answered. "But as far as meeting you, we can only leave that to chance."

"Why?"

"Please do not endeavor to force me to explanations," she answered with firmness. "I merely tell you that frequent meetings with you are unlikely—that is all."

We had walked on, and were nearing the gate leading out into the High Street, Kensington.

"In other words, then, you are not altogether pleased with my companionship?"

"No, really," she laughed sweetly. "I didn't say that. You have no reason to jump at such conclusion. I thank you very much indeed for your words of sympathy."

"And you have no desire to see me again?" I interrupted, in a tone of bitter disappointment.

"If such were the case, ours would be a very extraordinary friendship, wouldn't it?" and she lifted her eyes to mine with a kindly look.

"Then I am to take it that my companionship on this walk has not been distasteful to you?" I asked anxiously.

She inclined her head with a dignified air, saying, "Certainly. I feel that this evening I have at least found a friend—a pleasant thought when one is comparatively friendless."

"And as your friend—your devoted friend—I ask to be permitted to see you sometimes," I said earnestly, for, lingering at her side, I was very loth to part from her. "If I can ever be of any assistance, command me."

"You are very kind," she answered, with a slight tremor in her voice. "I shall remember your words always. Then, putting forth her well-gloved hand, as we stood upon the kerb of the High Street, she added, "It is getting late. We've taken such a long time across the Park that I must drive home;" and she made a gesture to a passing hansom.

"Before we part," I said. "I will give you a card, so that should you require

ON THE FARM

THE COSTLY THREE-YEAR-OLD STEER.

A most important phase of economical beef production is emphasized in a contribution to "The Farmer's Advocate" from Thos. B. Scott & Son, Middlesex Co., Ont., who outline their method of rearing calves, to be turned off as finished beefers around ten months of age, at weights of 850 to 900 pounds. Only well-bred calves of Shorthorn blood are raised, liberal use being made of skim milk, on which the calves are pushed rapidly forward, without losing their calf flesh. This system results in the production of plump baby beefers, which outclass all other material for building up a butchers' trade. That there is profit in raising them, no one who has tried it properly will doubt, providing, always, that the calf is out of a cow capable of squaring her own maintenance account at the pail, so that the youngster is not handicapped at the start by a heavy bill charged up against him for his mother's board. It is in the production of these milk-fed beefers that the dual-purpose cow makes her best showing in profit. For their production, perfection of beef type is not of so much importance as in the case of animals intended for marketing at a maturer age. In fact butchers will often take well-fed Holsteins at this age at the same price offered for Shorthorns, although, as a general thing, the latter breed will give best satisfaction for the purpose. Jersey and Guernsey steers should be avoided.

The writer has raised many well-beeves of various strains of breeding, and has found that, with a fair start on whole milk, tapered to skim milk at two or three weeks old, the calf being then fed about a gallon or more (warmed), three times a day, until four or five months old, and then a smaller quantity until ready for the block, weights of 800 to 900 pounds could be easily attained by eleven or twelve months with the use of a very little bran and oil-cake meal, combined with good clover hay, ensilage, roots and miscellaneous roughage. The calves were invariably kept in a comfortable basement stable for the first six months, at least, and usually the whole twelve-month, being tied or stanchioned only at feeding time. The stable was always kept clean and reasonably dry. This is important. Fall calves are preferable to those dropped in spring, and the favorite time for marketing is May or June, when beef almost invariably commands the best price of the year. Sometimes the calves have been sold at considerably less and sometimes considerably over a year, according as might be necessary to strike the best market, for they were fit to kill, at any age.

Of course, many may try this plan and fail through lack of pains and kindly interest in their charges. The greatest secret lies not in the feed, but in the feeding and general care, although the feed is certainly important, especially the skim-milk part. By allowing a proportion of whole milk sucked from the cow, and by using skim milk more liberally than the writer of this article has been accustomed to do, Messrs. Scott have secured exceptionally rapid gains. The prevalent practice described by them, of rearing pot-bellied, bloated, scouring, stunted spring calves on a grass lot, with separator milk or whey to drink almost from the first, with flies to pester, and not always shade to protect, is an ideal way to dissipate all hope of ever making them good doers and a source of profit to the community. Some feeder, buying them at two and a half or three years for three and a half or four cents a pound, may scrape a small profit out of his speculation through the increased value per pound given to the original carcasses, but his profit will not compensate for the loss incurred by the farmer who raised the feeders. If cost were closely calculated, it would be found that the ultimate returns of such a beast ordinarily amount to a sorry price for the total feed, pasturage and care bestowed upon when you will go and hunt in that box for something you need.

During the process of producing each crop the progressive farmer sees points at which he can make the labor a little lighter next year, the cost of production a little less, and the quality of the crop a little better.

The man with a stout heart, willing hands, the intelligence to direct, and the patience to overcome difficulties and the philosophy to accept misfortune, cheerfully, will succeed no matter where he finds himself, but, in every instance, it is the man that stays that wins.

Does the spring work crowd you? Do not get into a fret. Remember the largest house is built simply by laying one brick upon another. Lay out, beforehand, a definite amount of work for each day—not more than you can comfortably get through with—and then do it. You will be surprised in a short time to find how steadily everything is moving, and how easily, too.

In Nature's Storehouse There are Cures.—Medical experiments have shown conclusively that there are medicinal virtues in even ordinary plants growing up around us which give them a value that cannot be estimated. However, this may be, it is well known that Par-melee's Vegetable Pills, distilled from roots and herbs, are a sovereign remedy in curing all disorders of the digestion.

FIELD OF WATERLOO.

To be Acquired by Belgian Government.

A question relative to the preservation of the land of Waterloo in its present state having been asked in the Belgian Chamber, the Government of that country have just replied that the subject is under consideration. There is an idea (mooted, it is believed, by those having property on the field) that it would be a good thing to buy up the historic plain and keep it in its present condition, the various farms, etc., being secured and preserved.

It is difficult to see exactly what good purpose can be served by such an action, for the field itself has been entirely changed since the battle was fought, and the Duke of Wellington exclaimed, when, some time after the erection of the great mound, he looked forth over the country which had seen such great deeds on all sides, "They have changed all my battlefield."

It would seem that a certain group of persons have bought up, or have secured promise of possession of, many of the Waterloo farms, and they are, therefore, financially interested in the preservation of the field of Waterloo as it is, since this would mean expropriation at their own prices. That this is so would seem to be proved by the fact that the movers are principally Belgians.

English people are apparently but little concerned about the matter. They feel, perhaps, that the preservation of the nation's battlefields all over the world would be a rather onerous undertaking, and probably consider that while Hougoumont, with its splendid memories, remains untouched—and, as this belongs to one of the leading Belgian families, there is small fear of its destruction—enough remains for sentimental interest.

That a tramway should be constructed across the Plain of Waterloo will in no way lessen the attraction to military men, who know that already much of the uneven ground that afforded cover to the English and French has been levelled.

WARS BORN OF BOYCOTTS.

Nations Do Not Relish Being "Touched in Their Pockets."

Although the recent unpleasantness between China and Japan, due to the seizure by the former of the Tatsu Maru, has been officially declared to have been settled by the release of the impounded steamship, it seems not unlikely that war may yet break out owing to the persistent boycott which China is now declaring against all Japanese goods.

For history teems with wars due to this very cause. And that although the word only dates back to 1880, when a certain Captain Boycott, of Lough Mask Farm, in Ireland, was so served by his indignant neighbors.

But the practice was known long previously. To it was due the war which lost the British Empire the fee simple in all those rich and magnificent territories that now comprise the United States of America. The colonists would have none of Britain's goods, nor goods borne in British ships. They threw overboard in Boston Harbor the tea Britain sent them, and made bonfires of other more inflammable commodities. Then Britain landed troops to compel them to do otherwise, and hostilities broke out.

To Napoleon's Berlin decree, again, was due, more than to anything else, the share Britain took in the series of wars that led to his downfall. It declared a boycott—the biggest on record—against British commerce the world over. If it had succeeded, there would to-day have been no British Empire! Our forefathers, shrewd, hard-headed, old chaps, knew this, and for worth voted $500,000.000 for his overthrow.

And as did Britain then, so very likely may Japan do to-day. No more than individuals, do nations relish being "touched in their pockets."

"John," said the political leader's wife, "you'll have to get a new policeman assigned to this beat; Bridget doesn't like the present one." "All right," said he, "and while I'm about it I'll get one that likes his meat rare. I'm getting tired of overdone beef."

CHILDREN AS ASSETS.

Are Much Sought for by Spanish Beggars.

Quite a flourishing trade is done by the poorer classes of Madrid, who let out their children to beggars at so much per hour.

The intending hirer applies to the parents of a likely child, the price is agreed upon, a small amount paid down as a guarantee for the return of the little one, and the beggar forthwith sets out with his human implement of trade to implore the public charity.

The children whose task it is to soften the hearts of the passers-by are required to possess special qualifications. They must have hungry-looking faces, be first-rate criers and not very ugly, for a good-looking child is more likely to earn extra pennies on account of its pretty face than a less favored competitor.

While the professional beggar and his hapless charge wearily walk the streets of Spain's capital, the father of the child, comfortably seated in a tavern hard by his home, proudly remarks to his better half, as he contentedly sips his wine:

"What a splendid career our Joey has before him! He is hardly three years old and is already a bone of contention between the one-eyed man of Veneras street and the wooden-legged one of Alarban! As soon as he grows up we'll make a beggar of him!"

MONEY SAVED IS MONEY EARNED.

Just now when money is scarce, it is well for every one to look around and see where they can obtain their home and personal needs at the lowest cost. The W. H. Scroggie, Limited, Department W., Montreal, Que., are fast making an enviable reputation for themselves as "Universal Providers," and the people of Canada are not slow to take advantage of the splendid money-saving offers this firm makes to customers not residing in Montreal. This firm has just issued a splendid large beautifully illustrated Catalogue which is mailed free to anyone who asks for it. Better send for one to-day. We understand that while these prices are exceptionally low they also pay transportation charges on the goods they sell, something which no other firm of this kind in Canada does. They are a thoroughly reliable house and readily exchange anything which does not give absolute satisfaction or you can get your money back if you prefer it.

SOCIETY NOTE.

It sounds pretty in a report of a social affair to say that the house was illuminated with candles, but it means a lot of grease.

A Cure for Costiveness.—Costiveness comes from the refusal of the excretory organs to perform their duties regularly from contributing causes, usually disordered digestion. Painexes Vegetable Pills, prepared on scientific principles, are so compounded that certain ingredients go them pass through the stomach and act upon the bowels so as to remove their torpor and arouse them to proper action. Many thousands are prepared to bear testimony to their power in this respect.

Mrs. Jones—"You seem to have implicit confidence in your husband."

Mrs. Smith—"Of course I have. He never turns pale when I tell him he talked in his sleep."

A Requisite for the Rancher.—On the cattle ranges of the West, where men and stock are far from doctors and apothecaries, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is kept on hand by the intelligent as a ready made medicine, not only for many human ills; but as a horse and cattle medicine of surpassing merit. A horse and cattle rancher will find matters greatly simplified by using this Oil.

Goodwin, the American actor, described at a recent dinner a Turkish bath that he once took in Mexico. "My rubber," said Mr. Goodwin, "was a strong man, a very strong man. He laid me on the slab and prodded and kneaded and punched and hammered me in a most emphatic way. At the end, after I had got up, he came behind me before my sheet was adjusted, and gave me on the bare back four resounding whacks with the palm of his enormous hand. "What on earth did you do that for?" I panted. "No offence, boss," said the man; "it was only to let the office know I was ready for the next comer. Yue see, the bell's out of order in this room."

"I am proud to say that my grandfather made his mark in the world," observed the conceited youth. "Well, I suppose he wasn't the only man in those days who couldn't write his name," replied his bored companion.

PANGO.

THE GREATER DANGER.

There was never a more conscientious young man than Eben Soule, and when he found how much absorbed he had become with the mere idea of playing in the town band, he consulted his minister. "Do you reckon I could give up all that time to music without falling from grace?" he asked anxiously.

The good old Methodist had a saving sense of humor. He saw that his parishioner was much distressed between his wishes and his conscience, but the minister smiled on him, nevertheless.

"It's the horn you're asked to play, I hear," he said. "Ever had much experience with it, Eben?"

"Never tried it but once, but I like the sound of it first-rate," smiled the young man.

"Min!" said the minister. "Well, I think you needn't be afraid of falling from grace on account of it, but I do hope you'll manage things so your family and neighbors won't have to pass through the fiery temptation of hearing you practise too often, Eben."

An Irishman, having quarrelled with another left him with the following vicious remarks:—"Well, I hope ye'll never be where I wish you!"

In the treatment of summer complaints, the most effective remedy that can be used is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It is a standard preparation, and many people employ it in preference to other preparations. It is a highly concentrated medicine and its sedative and curative qualities are beyond question. It has been a popular medicine for many years and thousands can attest its superior qualities in overcoming dysentery and kindred complaints.

Mr. Nagget—"Oh, I haven't any fear of your ever doing that. Men's clothes are never very expensive."

MARK THIS DISTINCTION: A purely local disease of the skin, like barber's itch, is cured by Weaver's Cerate alone. But where the blood is loaded with impurity, such as Salt Rheum, Weaver's Syrup also should be used.

For more than a week a school-teacher had been giving lessons on the dog, and so, when the inspector came down and chose that very subject, there seemed every prospect of the class distinguishing itself. Things were progressing quite satisfactorily, and the teacher was congratulating himself on the trouble he had taken, when alas! a question was asked which made him tremble for the reputation of his scholars. "Why does a dog hang his tongue out of his mouth?" asked the inspector.
